America's Attack On Depression Reaches Climax

HOLIDAY IS SIGNIFICANT THIS YEAR

Labor Day Means More to 2,000,000 Additional Workers Than Year Ago
NRA DRIVE ADVANCES
Thousands More Expected to Be Put Back to Work as Federal Plans Move

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—(UP)—America's mass attack upon the depression reached a climax today on the most significant Labor Day in history. Since the holiday was celebrated a year ago an economic revolution has occurred, with the nation embarked now along an entirely new course for business, industry and the working man.

The summer's emergency re-employment campaign has been successful to the extent of putting some 2,000,000 persons back on the payrolls. Administrator Hugh S. Johnson estimated at the start that this number would gain jobs by Labor Day. Additional hundreds of thousands will regain old jobs or find new ones as the recovery program gains momentum and more and more industries come under the two-year fair practice codes of the NRA.

The program envisages eventual absorption of all of America's unemployed who want to work.

It is less than three months since President Roosevelt signed the National Industrial Recovery act. But in this time these significant developments have occurred:

- 1—The evils of child labor have been eliminated.
- 2—Abuses of the sweatshops have been corrected or eliminated.
- 3—Organized labor has strengthened its position.
- 4—Higher ethical standards have been set for the conduct of business.
- 5—Women's place in the industrial world has been improved.
- 6—Machinery has been set up for handling industrial disputes, both on a national scale with government backing and in individual industries.
- 7—A new spirit of co-operation has become apparent among many industrialists.
- 8—Long range planning has been forwarded.
- 9—Control of prices and production has been put into actual practice in certain instances.
- 10—The country's population has been welded into a co-operative agency of reconstruction.
- 11—Unfair trade practices and cut-throat methods of competition are being curbed.
- 12—Fair price structures are being developed.
- 13—Governmental statistical services are being co-ordinated.
- 14—Certain labor controversies of long standing have been settled.
- 15—Progress has been made to

LABOR DAY IS OBSERVED IN ORANGE COUNTY

Three Celebrations Planned for Holiday; Cotton to Speak at Picnic

THREE CELEBRATIONS in Orange county today are meccas for thousands of people marking the Labor day holiday as the official close of the summer season. The second annual distance swim and other aquatic events at Newport Beach and the final day of the Laguna Beach's annual Festival of Arts will entertain thousands of beach visitors while organized labor will be entertained at Irvine park with the second annual picnic of the Orange County Democratic club.

Basket lunches served at the park at noon will precede an afternoon of addresses and program of sports. The program to be given immediately after lunch will feature addresses by three men outstanding in this state, according to James L. Davis, chairman of the sponsoring organization and general chairman for the Labor day celebration in the park.

Hamilton H. Cotton, San Clemente resident and prominent in California Democratic affairs will be one of the speakers. Cotton was recently appointed to the state Public Works Advisory Board will discuss California's public works program.

Other speakers to take part in the celebration at Irvine park are: A. W. Hoch, president of the State Federation of Labor, discussing the National Recovery Administration, and Monroe Butler, state manager of the Home Owners' Loan corporation. Butler will discuss home loans.

Festival of Arts
At Laguna Beach the Festival of Arts, an annual event of that community will be brought to a close. One of the features of the closing day will be a parade at 1 p. m. featuring horsemen and horsewomen. The parade will be followed by a program of cowboy stunts on the field of the Los Angeles Riding club. Evening entertainment will be at the festival grounds.

The annual distance swim will be staged at Newport Harbor at 3 o'clock this afternoon with fast races scheduled for all three divisions, according to George P. Wilson, chairman of the chamber of commerce committee in charge of the event.

Cash prizes will be given in the

NOTED BANDIT MAKES ESCAPE FROM JAILERS

Harvey Bailey Locks Turnkey and Trusty in Cell and Takes Jailer

BULLETIN
ARDMORE, Okla., Sept. 4.—(UP)—Harvey J. Bailey, notorious convict who escaped from the Dallas county jail early today was recaptured a few hours later.

He was taken by officers in Ardmore about 11:15 a. m.

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 4.—(UP)
—Branding a smuggled revolver, Harvey Bailey, notorious desperado, locked a deputy jailer and a trusty in cells, kidnapped a turnkey and escaped from the Dallas county jail here today.

Bailey fled in an automobile owned by Nick Tress, deputy jailer, whom he overpowered and forced to accompany him on his daring flight to freedom.

Bailey overpowered Deputy Jailer C. W. Young and J. B. Brown, Negro trusty, as they passed the solitary cell row on the sixth floor of the eight-story jail building.

Pressing the revolver against Young's back, Bailey snarled: "I'm going to kill you."

"No, you've been pretty good to me," Bailey muttered. "I'll just take your keys and beat it."

Bailey then locked the jailer and Negro into the runaround

FOUR BALLOONS STILL IN RACE AT NOON TODAY

Two German, One French Entrant Down; Others Soar Over Canada

CUTIS-REYNOLDS AIRPORT, GLENVIEW, Ill., Sept. 4.—(UP)—Soaring toward the wilds of Canada with a bravado born in the sky itself, the world's crack balloonists raced today for fame and the Gordon Bennett trophy.

A German entry collapsed while being filled with gas for the race and two others descended yesterday.

A French balloon piloted by Georges Ravanine and Georges Blanchet came down in a cornfield not far from Albion, Mich., about 180 miles from Chicago. The Frenchmen said a leak in the gas bag prevented them from traveling a greater distance. Their balloon was undamaged in landing.

The German balloon, Deutschland, piloted by Dr. Erick Koerner and Richard Scheldt, descended at Kingston, Mich., a little less than 300 miles from Chicago.

Aerialists had a narrow escape from possible injury when their balloon struck a ditch as it descended.

One of the four balloons remaining aloft was over Ontario traveling at such a height that observers could not determine which entry it was. This craft was sighted over Lionshead, Ont., on the east shore of Lake Huron, and later was believed to have passed over Goderich, Ont. It was possible that this was the U. S. Navy balloon piloted by Lieut. Commr. T. G. W. Sottile, winner of the 1932 race. Earlier Settle's balloon was seen at Caro, Mich.

Reports on the progress of the other racers were lacking. Light winds blew the gas bags over Michigan toward the Ontario wilds. Because of the lack of strong air currents there was small hope for a new distance record.

The balloon race was the major event of the international air races at which Jimmy Wedell, Paterson, La. sent a new unofficial world's speed record for land planes.

Today he was to make a new effort to better the mark. Capt. Francis H. Wedell and Col. Roscoe Turner, Los Angeles, were leading entries in a 100-mile race over a closed course.

In another event of the international meet Mae Halzlip, St. Louis woman flier, won the women's international free-for-all trophy with an average of 191.11 miles an hour over a 50-mile course. Florence Klingensmith, Minneapolis, Minn., was second.

Will Allow Deadline To Go Unheeded

Auto Manufacturer Not to Leave Mountain Club Until Late in Week

MARQUETTE, Mich., Sept. 4.—(UP)—Henry Ford plans to ignore the NRA when the deadline for his signing the automobile code is reached Tuesday, the United Press was informed in a reliable quarter today.

It is probable, the United Press was told, that Ford would allow the deadline to pass without notice and make no explanation of his failure to sign the code. He must sign by midnight Tuesday if he is to signify his voluntary compliance with the terms of the automobile code.

Ford does not intend to leave the seclusion of the Huron Mountain club until the end of this week at the earliest, it was said. Several days before the automobile code was drawn up in Detroit earlier in the summer, General Hugh S. Johnson talked with Ford at Dearborn. He said Ford assured him of his willingness to cooperate with the government. Since then there has been no official intimation of Ford's attitude.

Ford remained inside the club grounds today, but Saturday he drove twice to the straggling village of Big Bay where he communicated with his Detroit offices by telephone.

DEFENDANT TO TELL STORY IN LAMSON TRIAL

Divorcee, Mentioned as "Other Woman," Also to Be Defense Witness

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 4.—(UP)—Rebuttal evidence will prove that David A. Lamson, Stanford campus intellectual accused of beating his wife Aileen to death, lied to her and to his employers while visiting another woman at Sacramento, it was claimed today by the prosecution.

When the trial resumes at 10 a. m. Tuesday, Mrs. Sara Kelley, divorcee, newspaperwoman and former Stanford co-ed, will be one of the first defense witnesses.

The state surprised Lamson's aides when it closed its case suddenly Friday. Today Prosecutor Allan P. Bridges said he held rebuttal evidence to disprove many important defense points.

While Lamson, the "perfect husband" of campus tradition, was in Sacramento with Mrs. Kelley, his expense accounts were falsified to show that he was in Stockton, Fresno, Merced and San Francisco, the state contends.

Four expense account sheets Lamson drew as business manager of the Stanford Press will be submitted by the state to prove that Lamson said he was elsewhere when actually he was registered at Sacramento hotels.

Lamson's defense plea that his 28-year-old wife was killed by an accidental fall in her bathtub may be shifted temporarily into the background as Mrs. Kelley is called to refute the state's allegation of a romantic attachment with Lamson.

Mrs. Kelley will declare that love poems she sent Lamson were for criticism and possible publication, that he visited her to confer about a garden page she was conducting for a Sacramento newspaper, and that Mrs. Lamson knew of their "business friendship."

The chief attack of the defense will be on the testimony of Dr. Frederick Proesch, county pathologist, and of Dr. A. W. Meyer, head of the anatomy department at Stanford.

Blood On Pipe
Prosecutor and a aide said they found blood on a pipe, claimed to have been the death weapon. Dr. Meyer said someone had seized Mrs. Lamson by the hair and pulled as her head was beaten, and that fractures could not have been sustained in a single fall.

Dr. Edward G. Heinrich of Berkeley, "scientific sleuth" who has figured in many solutions of crime mysteries, will dispute testimony that blood was traceable on the pipe after it had been in flames of a bonfire for hours.

Heinrich 10 years ago named Roy, Ray and Hugh D'Autremont as the bandit killers of a Southern Oregon train holdup after examination.

SERIOUSLY ILL

Governor James Rolph Jr., who is suffering from lung trouble and high fever in a San Francisco hospital.

GOVERNOR ILL WITH FEVER IN SAN FRANCISCO

State's Chief Executive in Hospital; Lungs Are Badly Congested

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4.—(UP)
—Governor James Rolph Jr., was "seriously but not dangerously" ill today at St. Francis hospital here. His presence at the hospital had been kept secret since Saturday night.

His physician, Dr. John Galloway, issued a statement that the Governor was suffering from a congestion of the lungs and a fever that had run as high as 103.5 degrees.

The Governor slept well during the night and appeared to be feeling better, hospital attendants reported early today.

His sleep Saturday night was broken and irregular, and lack of rest had hindered treatment of his illness.

It was learned Governor Rolph had not been feeling well for several days. He remained at Sacramento to speak Saturday at opening of the state fair. On reaching here he consulted Dr. Galloway and was ordered to the hospital.

Members of the family were at the Governor's bedside last night. The Governor did not permit news of his illness to be released at first because he did not consider himself very ill, Dr. Galloway said.

"He is seriously though not dangerously sick," said the doctor. "One might characterize his condition as critical. The congestion of the lungs has given us some concern and his temperature has run as high as 103.5 degrees."

"He will have to keep to his bed until the congestion clears and his fever abates. We have two nurses in attendance night and day."

It may be several days or several weeks before the Governor, known throughout the nation as "Sunny Jim" Rolph, can leave the hospital, Dr. Galloway said.

GALE WINDS CAUSE GREAT DAMAGE, SAID

Communication With Many Towns and Cities is Broken in Hurricane

REPORTS ARE MEAGER

Special Trains Evacuate 6000 Persons From Everglades During Night

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 4.—(UP)—A terrific hurricane moved inland at 2 a. m. (e.s.t.) today after lashing the Florida coast from here to Fort Pierce, 100 miles to the north. Communications were down to Fort Pierce and towns between. It was feared damage had been heavy. The barometer was dropping rapidly.

This town was without communication with the outside world for more than two hours while fierce winds, estimated to be reaching a velocity of 100 miles an hour in gusts, ripped through the streets. A hasty check indicated damage was comparatively slight. No deaths were reported, and only two injuries. A youth was blown through a plate glass window and a woman had a small piece of debris blown against her ankle.

The hurricane, roaring in from the Bahamas, was following a course almost due west.

Lines Severed
Fort Lauderdale, 75 miles south, was without communications. At 12:30 a. m. when lines were severed, a 30 mile wind was blowing and the barometer had dropped three points within a half hour. Miami, farther south, experienced gale winds of 40 to 50 miles an hour.

Fort was left here for the towns of Jupiter, Stuart, and Fort Pierce all to the north. It was believed the center of the storm passed north of here, but how far was a matter of conjecture. Stuart is half way between here and Fort Pierce.

The freighter, Western Sword, short of her propeller by the hurricane, was anchored off the Florida coast, riding out heavy seas and the screaming wind. She was believed safe.

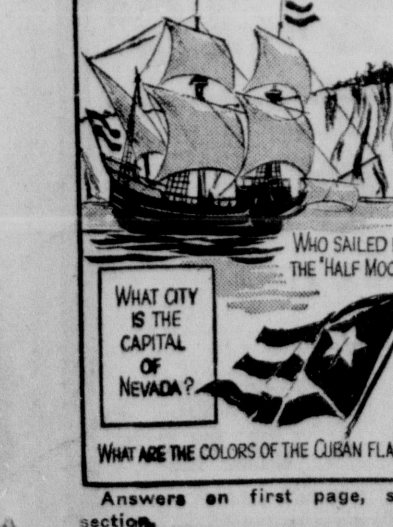

Thousands fled the district between Miami and Fort Pierce when the storm warnings were given. Those who remained boarded up their homes and took every possible precaution against loss of life and property damage.

Miami was south of the main force of the storm. Gale winds of 40 and 50 miles an hour were reported there.

Special trains evacuated approximately 6000 persons from the inland everglade region where scores died in the hurricane that wrecked Miami in 1926. Three thousand refugees from Clewiston and Moorhaven were taken to the Roaming estate near Lake Placid. The towns are on the western shore of Lake Okechobee, over which the storm is expected to pass.

The hurricane was expected to

ATTENDANCE RECORD AT FAIR FORECAST

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 4.—(UP)—California's 79th annual state fair continued its drive on attendance records today as huge crowds gathered at the exposition grounds for the Labor Day celebration.

The largest second day's attendance in state fair history was recorded yesterday when 57,000 persons passed through the gates. Paid admissions on opening day numbered 34,251, exceeding by 5000 the high record of the initial day in 1929.

High class racing events were the outstanding features of the Labor Day program. The schedule included a 2:14 trotting race for a purse of $200, a 2:20 pace for a purse of $1500, and the state fair stake for 2-year-old pacers, with a purse of $400.

Three running races completed the card.

MARSHALL DUFFIELD MARRIED ON SUNDAY

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Sept. 4.—(UP)—Marshall Duffield, University of Southern California law student, and Dorothy Lee, motion picture actress, were honeymooning here today. They were married here yesterday by a justice of the peace, much to the surprise of friends who although aware of their engagement had understood they would wait until after Duffield had been graduated.

Miss Lee was divorced in 1931 from James Fidler, motion picture publicity man.

PUERTO RICO CHIEF VISITS ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—(UP)
—A political explosion in Puerto Rico resounded in the United States today as Robert H. Gore, newly appointed governor of the island possession declared war on political opponents there on the eve of a discussion of his problems with President Roosevelt.

Governor Gore was expected to see President Roosevelt tomorrow. After a brief stormy honeymoon on the job at San Juan, Governor Gore has returned to the states declaring that he is ready to go back unscathed by demands of opposition political leaders in Puerto Rico.

Controversy is ranging around the assertion that Gore announced he intended to demand undated resignations in advance from persons he appointed to his cabinet.

LABOR WILL SEEK EVEN SHORTER WEEK

AKRON, O., Sept. 4.—(UP)
—Organized labor will demand still shorter working hours than provided in NRA industrial codes, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared today in a Labor day address here.

"We firmly believe that the hours of labor set in the industrial codes thus far provided for major industries have not reduced working time sufficiently so they would absorb their share of the unemployed," Green said.

The labor president's speech was made in the stronghold of the open shop rubber industry, and it was considered especially significant in view of the strenuous efforts to unionize workers in the tire factories here.

STORK PAYS VISIT TO FAIR ON SUNDAY

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 4.—(UP)—An unscheduled event enlivened the state fair yesterday when "Doc" Stork suddenly descended into the main exhibition building and presented an 18-year-old Japanese girl, Miss Fumie Furukawa of Sacramento, with an eight-pound girl.

The young mother and new born babe were found in a room in the main exhibition building, frightened and hysterical, the girl summoned amazing strength—considering her condition—and tried desperately to escape. She was quieted after a struggle and later taken to the county hospital.

FEDERAL EMPLOYEES SEEK BLUE EAGLE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 4.—(UP)—A change in the federal employment policy, "so that the government itself may wear the NRA badge of honor" is the object of the National Federation of Federal Employees, whose convention opened here today.

Delegates representing about 400 local unions of bureau and department workers were in attendance. The postoffice department, with unions of its own, was not included.

Elimination of pay cuts and enforced furloughs, shorter working hours with abolition of "sweatshop shifts of 12 to 14 hours daily," extension of the merit system and equitable arrangement of leaves constituted principal topics of the convention. President Luther S. Stewart of Washington said.

WILL RUSH STATE HIGHWAY PROJECTS

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 4.—(UP)
—Threatened tie-ups of state highway construction today impelled Earl Lee Kelly, director of public works, to announce he would institute condemnation suits in most cases where right-of-way disputes arise.

Kelly took the position nothing should "hold up" the road building program, which has been speeded up to provide immediate unemployment relief.

"I feel," Kelly said, "that with so much unemployment staring us in the face, it is not right that a single land owner should stand in the way of getting relief to families in distress."

Tom Wadsworth, last year's winner, and Philip "Flip" Allen, who came in second last year, have both entered in the open division, along with Bud Hennicot, of Los Angeles and Balboa, Bob Foster, of Venice, Harold Skeets, of North Hollywood, Ray Skeets, of Catalina, Robert Steele of Hollywood, and others.

Many Contestants

Among the amateur contestants will be Donald Matson, of Altadena, Norman Nourse, of Los Angeles and Balboa, Wayne Dye, of Costa Mesa, and Jack Woolner, Byron Babel, Lester Van Der Cruzen and Johnny Bromilaw, all of the Inland Aquatic League of Highland.

Among the girl entrants are Barbara Baldinger, of El Monte, 14-year-old mermaid who created a sensation last year when she competed against men and came in fourth, also Betty Mahone, of Los Angeles, who has been a prize winner in several Southern California long distance swims.

The course will be the same as last year, starting on the beach west of Balboa pier, around that pier to the harbor entrance, through the entrance channel and down the bay, with the tide, to a point opposite Main street.

Prizes will be distributed after the event at the Balboa Pavilion, at which time also prizes won in the annual Tournament of Lights here will also be given to prize-winners present.

ward eventual adjustment of working hours to the machine age.

The unfair trade practices which the codes propose to abolish list the giving and taking of bribes, flagrant misrepresentations and other activities which come more within the realm of outright dishonesty than under any possible conception of progressive business methods.

The universal cry against practices of this type has been encouraging to those in government life who believe that the American business man is essentially honest and not given generally to unscrupulous tactics.

Ring Message

President Roosevelt signed the recovery act on June 16. At the time he issued a ringing message to the American people that stands today as the soundest interpretation of the recovery act yet compiled.

On the same day the law was signed the cotton textile industry submitted the first code of fair competition as provided in the act, which opened the way for industrial self-government freed from the shackles of the Sherman anti-trust law of 1890 and the Clayton act of 1914.

The cotton textile code was swept through hearings and to the president's desk in ruthless cutting away of shibboleths which had plagued the industry for years. Child labor was knocked out almost overnight. Wages were raised and industrial relations set-up organized. The way was cleared for eventual elimination of mill towns.

One by one the big industries came forward—steel, lumber, oil, clothing, automobiles, bituminous coal—until 80 per cent of America's life was represented before the NRA.

NRA Drive

The most spectacular part of the summer's reemployment effort was the "blue eagle" drive under presidential agreements to increase wages and shorten working hours. Johnson, the army general who turned his talents to peace time work in the most pretentious economic experiment ever attempted in the United States, was the driving force behind that movement.

Johnson feels now, at the climax of that campaign, that he was thoroughly justified in forcing it through over the objections of some of his colleagues.

The plan, announced the latter part of July has been successful in enlisting practically all of America under the "blue eagle".

Many problems still lie ahead. They are tremendous problems. Among them are the checking up on recalcitrant or "chiseling" industries who attempt to gain the benefits of the National Industrial Recovery Act without contributing an additional penny to their payrolls or improving the working conditions of their employees.

WILL ROGERS says:

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 4. (To the Editor of The Register.) Now, like any good cause, it's naturally going to have little gossip and whisperings about it, so you Democrats that are handing out the jobs in Washington on all this national recovery program don't discriminate against the old Republican. This is a national thing, and I doubt if any country, regardless of politics, ever in peace time entered into a thing any more wholeheartedly, and when somebody good-naturedly started the definition of N. R. A. (No Republicans Allowed) you want to keep that a joke. This thing is on a much higher plane than handing out the old post-offices.

WILL ROGERS.

Texas Stormed

GALVESTON, Tex., Sept. 4.—(UP)—The Texas coast was battered today in preparation for a tropical hurricane of great intensity expected to strike some time around noon. It was the same storm that took a toll of approximately 100 lives in Cuba. An exodus from Galveston and other coast towns took hundreds into the interior. At Port Aransas, 200 miles southwest of here, 250 of the town's 500 inhabitants were reported evacuated.

Hurricane warnings were displayed from Corpus Christi to Freeport, northeast storm warnings north of Freeport to Port Arthur, and northwest storm warnings south of Corpus Christi to Brownsville.

Residents feared the storm would prove the worst of a series that have struck the Texas coast this season. It was moving westward across the Gulf of Mexico at a velocity reported between 80 and 100 miles an hour.

DEATH CLAIMS WELL KNOWN G. G. TEACHER

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucille Harbottle Munz, 25, well known Garden Grove matron who died Saturday of a heart and intestinal ailment, will be held at 10 a. m., tomorrow from the Winbiger Funeral home, 609 North Main Street, followed by cremation.

In addition to her husband, Raymond E. Munz, the deceased is survived by her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Harbottle, of Modjeska canyon, two sisters Marguerite and Dorothy Harbottle and two brothers Robert Bruce and Richard N. Harbottle, all of Orange.

Mrs. Harbottle, who was a member of the Junior Elbell club of Santa Ana, had lived in Garden Grove for several years where she taught in the elementary schools for the past three years. Her husband is an employee of the Reynolds Gravel company. Mrs. Harbottle was a graduate of the State Teachers' College of Greeley, Colo. Mrs. Munz was well known as a vocalist having participated in many musical programs about the county and having sung in several programs broadcast over station KRGB.

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 4.—(UP)—Alfred C. Read Jr., broker, was to return to Los Angeles today with witnesses who will testify for Claire Windsor, defendant in a $100,000 alienation of affections suit brought by Read's wife.

The witnesses will say that the blonde film actress couldn't have stolen Read's love for his wife, because he didn't love his wife at that time.

Among the witnesses are Mrs. Alfred C. Read, his mother; Miss Grace Read, his sister; and Miss Clarisse Champion, formerly a private secretary.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG -- News Behind The News --

WASHINGTON
By George Durne

HARMONY
The union movement is today in its greatest crisis.

To quote William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, "We can not return to the business practices of 1923."

Taking a specific line from the Labor Day message of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins it appears the Administration can't achieve the goal of greater employment with higher wages "unless our people have purchasing power sufficient to buy the products of the mass production system for their comfort and well-being."

So far there is perfect harmony in ideas.

DISCORD

Miss Perkins, from long experience in New York state, is sympathetic with organized labor's cause. In her Labor Day statement she demands there be "A new era for the country's wage earners, salaried workers and employees."

Such a program, she says, will result in shortened working hours and "remuneration in harmony with the higher standards of living underlying our new consumptive economy."

We want, she says, enough to eat, enough to wear, a home with average comforts at least.

Miss Perkins' statement, however, is dedicated solely to a furtherance of the NRA program.

Green, speaking for the A. F. of L., says "It is up to the workers—the Government must look to know whether employers are living up to their contracts."

The labor boss emphasizes that the message of unionism must be carried to all who work in order to "do our part to prevent exploitation by helping to organize business in the service of all."

BATTLE

Back of all this is a demand on industry's part that General Johnson definitely interpret that portion of the Recovery Act dealing with the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively.

The Boss of NRA has done this several times. On each occasion he has said the law meant exactly what it says and could not be dodged. The automobile men managed to get a clause in their code giving the privilege to hire, fire or promote workers regardless of union affiliations. A formal statement was made by NRA's labor board that this particular code was accepted in the face of literal adherence to the law.

There is still a heavy argument between capital and labor.

Miss Perkins says that "if and when" NRA increases buying power while at the same time providing more jobs at better wages we shall have negotiated the hurdle.

Green says our "greatest responsibility in the immediate future is to carry the message of unionism to all who work and to do our part to prevent exploitation by helping to organize business in the service of all."

The battle between industry and labor is quite intense. At the risk of hazarding a guess labor will win this time.

DUCK

Gentlemen who get a kick out of lying in a chilly duck blind at early dawn on a cold fall day are having their moments with gentlemen who can not bear to think of a duck being blasted down by a shotgun of any gauge.

The time is approaching for the President's annual proclamation setting an open season for hunting under the Migratory Bird Act. Therein lies the story.

Somehow or other the anti-sneaked a joker into the proclamation. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace sent up to President Roosevelt for signature. It said simply that no birds could be shot within a 100-yard radius of where they were fed by human hands. The proclamation thus worded went up to Hyde Park for signature. The hunters got hep to the situation and put in a swift squawk. As a result the proclamation came back unsigned with a suggestion that a hearing be held to determine relative merits.

HAND-OUTS

Bird protectors headed by William T. Hornaday, New York zoologist, appeared to protect the game fowl in their migration. Thomas H. Beck, fish and game commissioner for Connecticut, and former Senator Harry Hawes of Mo. led the list of protesting hunters.

From the latter viewpoint "baiting"—or artificial feeding—"not only is a common practice among gun clubs but absolutely necessary if birds enroute from Canada to the Southland are to survive. The hunters said 84 per cent of all migratory birds killed met their Waterloo at the hands of predatory beasts and birds compared to 3 per cent shot down in annual sport. They said also the recent storm and the late drought had ruined the natural food of the birds. To survive their long journey they must partake of the wayside hand-outs.

It's all up to the President again.

NOTES

A government agent in Texas recently mixed political medicine to come to Washington as head of his service under the New Deal. Instead he found himself demoted and placed under an agent transferred from the North. Vice President Garner and Rep. Kleberg wrote in strong letters of protest about the "damn Yankee Republican" superimposed on their favorite. A search of the files here revealed that the Texas agent had written to ex-Senator Phipps (Republican) of Colo. in 1923 saying he was a good G. O. P. man. All his pro-tions before the New Deal came from Republican endorsements. They tell the story belatedly of the time during the last campaign when former Senator Jim Reed of Mo. and Gen. Hugh Johnson, now heading NRA, were put to work in Democratic headquarters preparing an anti-Hoover speech. Both men felt so intensely against Mr. Hoover that they could do was walk up and down the room uttering phrases never meant for a public platform.

NEW YORK

By James McMullin

LABOR

Labor Day should mean more to organized labor this year than ever before. New York believes that labor's position has been strengthened to a greater degree in the past two months than in all its previous history. The seal of government approval on collective bargaining is a momentous milestone to future industrial history. The principle that the worker is entitled to a decent living for his services has been firmly established. For the first time wages are placed above business profits. The shorter hour program brings workers and work to be done somewhat near into line.

The scoffers say that NRA virtually eliminates the profit motive and predict a collapse of business because of the lack of incentive for capital. Keener analysts deride these forebodings. The new deal does imply a fair return on invested capital—as capital will eventually discover—but not extravagant returns made possible by sweatshop methods.

All the excitement about "redistribution of wealth" boils down to that. Local authorities who have thought that far ahead have gotten over their early alarm on that subject.

But it would be a mistake to assume that labor's golden era is already here. Surface indications that the Federation is having everything its own way are misleading. Important concessions on the industrialist side have been made in most of the recent codes.

The steel and automobile industries have preserved their open-shop principle intact. Specific phrases to this effect were dropped from the codes to avoid argument but the union have a long way to go if they hope to organize U. S. Steel or General Motors. Even the coal operators, who finally consented to deal with the Mine Workers, yielded more form than substance. In spite of all the talk about cooperation latent hostility between employers and unions is as bitter as ever.

Some labor leaders feel that the Government has double-crossed them by refusing to rule out the open-shop. But the point is that the Government had to be realistic in order to get NRA moving at all. The important thing was to create jobs and sustain wages, and antagonizing industry by openly flouting ancient prejudices would have gummed the works.

Labor has cause for self-congratulation on the victories already won. But it isn't dominant in American industry yet by a long shot.

UNIONS

Paradoxically progress already made has left an insect in the union honey. Prospective members are reluctant to kick in with heavy dues. They feel that the Government is taking care of them on wages and hours so why pay money to a special organization to do the same thing?

BOARD

The National Labor Board has done a noble job to date in preventing labor outbreaks but its biggest chore is still ahead.

Potential strikes are smoldering under the surface in several industries. Professional labor agitators—who see their influence waning—have done their best to stir up trouble to justify their existence. It will take all of Leo Wolman's hard-headed realism and William Green's diplomatic gifts to keep some factory fires burning.

WOLMAN

There is a good deal of talk in New York about Leo Wolman's rising star. There are many who think he is destined to a brighter place in the Administration firmament than Moley ever had. They say he comes closer to being a practical idealist than anyone else connected with NRA.

FEDERATION

That bright idea for an American Federation of Manufacturers to oppose the Federation of Labor seems to have died before it was born. It couldn't get worthwhile support in New York. Objectors claimed it would have no other mission in life than to provide a single target for organized labor to shoot at. At present labor has to scatter its fire.

LIQUOR

Liquor syndicates are sending agents abroad in droves to buy up British supplies. One man was given instructions to spend a million. He was told by the Scotch brokers that there wasn't that much whiskey to be had. Americans are at their wits' ends because the British are playing a coy game and holding out for big prices. According to inside figures there are 134,474,000 gallons of bonded whiskey lying in Britain at the present time. Two months ago it could have been bought for a dollar and a quarter a gallon. Today it is worth 4 dollars. But the owners are waiting for it to touch 5 before they take Americans' money.

SIDELIGHTS

Three of the coal mine officials most strongly opposed to the proposals made by John L. Lewis are former members of the United Mine Workers. New York hears that the C. C. C. is going to start a "forest legion", a cynic sadly remarks "more pensions". Most of the former officials of the Reich Broadcasting Co. are in Nazi prison camps. The poor cusses are taking the rap because they followed orders under the previous regime. They wouldn't let Hitler on the air and he is getting even.

cage on the sixth floor, and walked into the lobby on that floor. Deputy Jailor E. H. Morrow, at a desk checking off breakfasts for prisoners, was on duty.

Bailey pushed the gun against Morrow's back. "Don't make any trouble," he said, "I don't want to hurt anyone."

Morrow tried to reach for the emergency alarm button, but Bailey saw the move and threatened him again.

While Morrow was unlocking the gates to the cell floor, "Cap" C. Neilland, jail cook, came down from the eighth floor. Bailey herded the cook into the corner with the remainder of his captives.

Then he entered the elevator, forcing C. L. King, Negro operator to drop him to the first floor. Jailor Tresp was talking to a man outside the building when the elevator stopped.

Bailey, evidently aware of the floor plan of the building, overpowered Tresp and marched out through the back door of the jail to a parking station where county automobiles were stored.

Young, locked up on the sixth floor of the jail building, saw Bailey and Tresp climb in the latter's car.

The motor roared and the car slipped away.

It was 30 minutes before the escape was made public. An hour later police broadcast said the men were seen in the north part of Dallas. The announcer said Bailey was riding with Tresp, that the car was headed north.

Jail officials were at a loss to account for Bailey gaining possession of the gun. He had been held in solitary confinement since his arrest last August 12.

Bailey and four members of the R. G. (Boss) Shannon family were captured at the Shannon farm in Wise county, about 45 miles northwest of Dallas. They were accused of participation in the kidnapping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City millionaire oil man.

Bailey, an escaper convict from the Kansas state penitentiary, was charged with being the brains of the Urschel abduction.

He was accused of participation in the Kansas City union station massacre in indictments returned in the Missouri city last week.

Lamson will tell his story to the jury of seven men and five women. The police and charm that made him a leader of campus activity in drama, writing and society, is relied upon to convince the jury of his innocence.

He will say he obtained the iron pipe to use as a clothes hanger, but Alene found it unsuitable. He said he had not seen it for months before the death of his wife. Investigators raked it out of ashes of a bonfire Lamson attended on the morning of May 30, when Alene was killed.

17 INJURED IN SAN CLEMENTE EIGHT WEEK-END COOK AND BURGLARY AUTO ACCIDENTS FOR

Seventeen persons were injured in eight Labor day traffic accidents over the weekend, it was revealed this morning from a checkup of police records in the county.

Four members of one family were hurt at 11:30 o'clock last night when cars driven by Benito Gomez, Cypress, and H. W. Barton, Long Beach, collided at Lincoln boulevard and Moody streets near Cypress. Barton claimed Gomez failed to make a boulevard stop. Gomez, his wife, Mrs. Marguerite Gomez, 22, and two sons, Benito Jr., 2 and Ricardo, nine months, were all taken to the Orange county hospital where all except Gomez are confined with serious injuries. The infant is the most seriously injured with scalp wounds, possible concussion and bruises.

Four Mexicans from the Teflingwell ranch were injured Saturday at 11 p. m. when the car in which they were riding left the road and turned over on Central avenue one mile west of La Habra. Those hurt were Albert Castillo, 23, driver, Joe Diaz, 24, N. Lopez, 23 and G. Biale, 24. All were reported by police to have been drinking.

An unidentified Mexican who collided head-on with a car driven by Ray Donald Chesley, 5614 Alameda street, Los Angeles, at 7 p. m. yesterday on East First street near Garfield, is being sought by police today after running away from the scene of the accident. The Mexican left his demolished car in the middle of the road and ran away before witnesses could catch him. Miss Loretta Grant, Los Angeles, riding with Chesley, had one tooth knocked out and received minor cuts. She was given first aid treatment at the Santa Ana Valley hospital.

Mrs. Virginia Graham, 23, Altadena, had a narrow escape from death Saturday when the car in which she was riding overturned on the Coast Highway near Tyrone's camp in Laguna Beach and pinned her under the rear seat. Motorists extricated her from the wreckage and she was rushed to the Laguna Beach hospital where she was treated for painful injuries to the back and chest. The car was driven by Louis P. Smith, Long Beach, who attempted to make a quick turn and turned the car over.

Mrs. Frances R. Metcalf, Rubidoux avenue, Riverside, escaped injury yesterday when her car was injured into the rear of a machine driven by Bill Moody of El Centro on Broadway street, Costa Mesa. Moody stopped suddenly to test his brakes, he said, and did not know Mrs. Metcalf was directly behind him.

Two young women were injured in an automobile collision at Central avenue and La Habra road at 6 a. m. Sunday when their car was reported to have gone through a boulevard stop and crashed into a car driven by Herman Wohlfarth, Brea Canyon road, Fullerton. Wohlfarth was only slightly injured when his heavy sedan turned around three times and finally overturned. The two women, Mrs. Don Chenoweth, 25 and Mrs. Vivien Murray, 35, both actresses of Beverly hills, were treated for minor injuries at the Fullerton General hospital and later transferred to a Beverly Hills hospital. It was reported by witnesses that the women were intoxicated.

H. M. Arndt, 138 South Pritchard, Fullerton, was injured Sunday morning when his car hit a power pole at Commonwealth and Magnolia streets. He is confined in the Fullerton General hospital.

Martin Althen, 24, Los Angeles, was taken to the Orange County hospital and two unidentified persons are at the Santa Ana Valley hospital following a wreck in Tustin this morning. Althen suffered a fracture of his arm and the extent of injuries to the other two persons could not be ascertained.

It is believed the car in which they were riding left the road while rounding a turn on the Coast highway.

Three daring bandits were sought throughout the state today following the holdup of Jack Wood, R. D. 1, Box 22A, Placentia, as he was driving into his Neeno Ranch home at Placentia and Palm avenues last night.

Wood stepped out of his car and was accosted by two men while a third was at the wheel of a large touring car with the engine running. One of the men, dressed in khaki army uniform and holding a large automatic pistol, demanded money of Wood but he succeeded in keeping his money by a ruse and lost only a billfold containing identification papers and a small amount of change. The second man was dressed in a light suit.

The men asked road directions of Wood after they had searched him and then sped away in their car. A description and alarm was sent over the police teletype system as well as the Los Angeles police radio broadcast.

Burglar Foiled As Owner Returns

Glenn Baker, 26, farmer, broke into the home of George Henning, Tustin, and nearly succeeded in staging a successful burglary Saturday night but Henning returned home too soon, placed Baker under arrest and brought him to the county jail.

Baker had gained entrance by crawling through a rear window and was engaged in ransacking the house when Henning returned. The intruder was caught by investigation by Deputy Sheriffs Art Bells and E. E. Perry.

Golfer Arrested On Check Charge

Fred W. Schofield, a golf pro, said to be wanted in Orange county on a check charge, was arrested by Los Angeles police, according to advice received here by Sheriff Logan Jackson. Inquiries at the sheriff's office revealed that Schofield is charged with having passed a worthless check on a Fullerton automobile dealer in purchasing a car.

DR. GEORGE A. WARMER GIVES CLOSING ADDRESS OF UNION CHURCH SERVICES IN CITY

DR. GEORGE A. WARMER spoke at the last Union Service of the summer season at the Presbyterian church Sunday night. His subject was "Jesus—Strategist or Tactician." He used John 10:10 as his text, "I am come that they may have life and have it more abundantly."

The speaker said in part: "Jesus is using a fine dramatic figure to present a potent truth. In the analogy there are the ideas of providence, of interest, of protection, of planning, of sacrifice. The shepherd is strategist."

"In military maneuvers two controlling groups appear. There is the tactician, who while subject to command, is nevertheless officer in the managing of the details and movements in a district. Upon his efficiency much depends. Yet just as he is certain of victory from an order to retreat, so the strategist, who sees not only the individual sectors, but who has responsibility for the whole campaign."

"The higher, the more comprehensive, the viewpoints the more prosopical the result."

Strategist of Centuries

"Jesus is the strategist of the centuries. There are considerations of His conceptions which lately have been grossly neglected. He, at least, underemphasized. He held to four major principles."

"First, this is a moral world. Choice is the necessity for freedom. Without freedom responsibility cannot be assigned. A moral world is a world of right and wrong. Choice is granted the subjects."

"John Fisk was so sure of the moral foundations of the universe that he said: 'Subtract from the universe its moral meaning and nothing remains but unreal phantoms, the figments of false metaphysics.'"

"The moral human being attributes some worth to ordinary common sense. Unless there can be found in the procedure of things something better than a firm basis of unyielding despair adjustment should be made. If the universe were so made as to annihilate sooner or later everything that man thinks has worth, common sense would seem to dictate that man should adjust so that he would be what the universe thinks worth. The universe, as some argue, may be indifferent to him, but no one believes it to be less than usable, or incapable of understanding. Jesus thought of the world as an expression of the kindly intent of a personal God toward men. He saw in the good will of men toward one another a spirit toward which all forces would one day move. The Christian thinks of Christ as the incarnation of this spirit."

"Second, Human life has pre-eminent value—value above and beyond all else. Not things, but men, are important. Things are useful as servants but deadly as masters. 'What shall it profit a man if he gains the whole world but loses his own soul?'"

"For want of imagination we are blind to the implications. In Ernest Fremont's little book, 'Jesus after Nineteen Centuries,' says according to information which has been gathered by the International Bureau at Geneva, the number of workers now unemployed the world around is probably twenty-five million; which means that the total number of the world's needy today is some hundred million, a number almost equal to the entire population of the United States. One hundred millions of men, women, and children are now in want of the very necessities of life! To claim that suffering such as this is self-caused by its victims would be absurd; and to assume that it is inevitable would be fatal. It is far too great to be permanently endured."

"Jesus, after Nineteen Centuries, says according to information which has been gathered by the International Bureau at Geneva, the number of workers now unemployed the world around is probably twenty-five million; which means that the total number of the world's needy today is some hundred million, a number almost equal to the entire population of the United States. One hundred millions of men, women, and children are now in want of the very necessities of life! DR. GEORGE A. WARMER GIVES CLOSING ADDRESS OF UNION CHURCH SERVICES IN CITY

DR. GEORGE A. WARMER spoke at the last Union Service of the summer season at the Presbyterian church Sunday night. His subject was "Jesus—Strategist or Tactician." He used John 10:10 as his text, "I am come that they may have life and have it more abundantly."

The speaker said in part: "Jesus is using a fine dramatic figure to present a potent truth. In the analogy there are the ideas of providence, of interest, of protection, of planning, of sacrifice. The shepherd is strategist."

"In military maneuvers two controlling groups appear. There is the tactician, who while subject to command, is nevertheless officer in the managing of the details and movements in a district. Upon his efficiency much depends. Yet just as he is certain of victory from an order to retreat, so the strategist, who sees not only the individual sectors, but who has responsibility for the whole campaign."

"The higher, the more comprehensive, the viewpoints the more prosopical the result."

"Jesus is the strategist of the centuries. There are considerations of His conceptions which lately have been grossly neglected. He, at least, underemphasized. He held to four major principles."

"First, this is a moral world. Choice is the necessity for

METHODIST PASTOR DEMANDS SQUARE, NEW DEAL FOR LABOR

FULLERTON, Sept. 4.—Urging men for gain, and urged that all that society must cleanse itself and stand for what is right and just, the Rev. E. Dow Hoffman, pastor of Fullerton Methodist church, last night preached a sermon on "The Laborer is Worthy" as a concluding sermon in the union sessions of Fullerton churches this summer.

The pastor talked of a large audience and said not only must labor be given a square deal, but it must be given a square deal, and in taking Christ as an example, the speaker said that Christ called the laborers of the world's work to the great places in the building of the Kingdom of God.

The fact that society looks down on labor, generally, is one to be deplored, the speaker said, and the fact that men are willing and able to work, and cannot find work, "is an indictment against the civilization of the day."

The sermon included a reprimand at the business or the industry that imperils the lives of

MISS PEARSON BECOMES BRIDE AND LICENSES OF W. H. JEWETT TOTAL $1285

FULLERTON, Sept. 4.—A beautiful wedding ceremony was witnessed by several hundred guests at 10 o'clock Saturday night at the Fullerton Christian church, when Miss Winnette Pearson became the bride of William H. Jewett, with the Rev. George A. Tinsley, pastor of the church, reading the vows.

Later in the evening, the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Pearson, renewed their vows at their home on Skyline drive, it being the 25th anniversary of their wedding. Following the two ceremonies, a reception was held at the Pearson home. Mr. Pearson is chief of Fullerton police.

Miss Pearson was dressed in white satin, ornamented with seed pearls, for her ceremony. The dress was cut full length, with puff sleeves, and she wore a silk tulle veil, with cap, and orange blossoms to hold the cap in place, and she carried white rosebuds and gardenias in a shower bouquet. Her shoes were of white satin, and she wore at her throat a necklace her mother had worn at her ceremony, borrowed from the mother for the occasion.

Included in the wedding party were the matron of honor, Mrs. Cleo Yates, a sister of the bride, who was clad in yellow net, and who wore a yellow hat and shoes to match, while her bouquet was of sweet peas, and in shades of pink and yellow, Mrs. Richard Jewett, a sister-in-law of the bridegroom; Miss Julia Jewett, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Virginia Simonton, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Norma Troeder, a friend of the bride. Earl Marston, Baldwin Park, best man, Richard Jewett, and James Jewett, brothers of the bridegroom, and Revella Pearson, a brother of the bride.

The bridesmaids were clad in pastel shaded gowns. Mrs. Jewett in blue lace, cut with puff sleeves, Miss Jewett in pink lace and Miss Simonton in blue, and all wore turbans to match their gowns, and carried bouquets of sweet peas.

The little flower girl was dressed in a long pink organdy dress. The ceremony was read before a flower-laden altar, and the father of the bride gave her away.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Charlotte Davis played several numbers on the organ and Mrs. Winnette Cole, of Whittier, a cousin of the bride, sang, "My Darling," "Revelation" and "Because."

The party came to the altar to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Wagner's "Lohengrin," and the recessional was to the strains of "The Wedding March" from Mendelssohn. Additional music was provided by Miss Grace Wade, of Los Angeles, a cousin of the bride, who presented several "cello numbers."

Following the ceremony at the church, Mr. and Mrs. Pearson renewed their vows before a flower altar at their home on Skyline drive. Mrs. Pearson wore a blue chiffon dress, and a corsage of gardenias, a gift of her son-in-law. Standing with the couple were Mr. and Mrs. William Kelley, of Garden Grove, friends of the bride, and Mrs. Clifford Jones of Alamitos, former neighbor of the pair, celebrating their silver anniversary, read the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearson were recipients of many lovely pieces of silver honoring their anniversary. The double reception which followed was held in the dining room, where two cakes decorated the tables, and where Mrs. Pearson cut the enormous cake of white and pink, and the newlywed Mrs. Jewett cut her three-tiered bride's cake. Mrs. Harold Troeder, Mrs. Ed Stark, Mrs. Grover Walters, Mrs. Walter Borg and Mrs. Sarah Mumm served punch and assisted with serving the many guests at the reception.

Following the reception, the young couple left for a honeymoon trip. She was clad in a rough blue crepe, with grey accessories. On their return they will reside at Coalinga, where he is employed.

Beach, Street, Water Improvements Proposed

$40,000 PLAN IS BACKED AT THREE ARCHES

THREE ARCHES, Sept. 4.—With only one dissenting vote, the property owners of this subdivision, at a mass meeting Saturday night, gave approval to a $40,000 project proposed by the directors of the South Coast County Water district for the grading and improvement of streets east of the boulevard and the laying of a cast iron water distribution system. It is proposed to seek a loan under the national public works act, which, under the government grant of 20 per cent, would cut the gross amount to $32,000 and spread the assessments over a 15-year period at four per cent interest for the deferred payments. A petition for the improvement was filed with the water board recently.

Charles E. Bent, a prominent Los Angeles insurance broker, who has a summer home in the tract, was chosen chairman of the meeting. He quoted figures, based on the rough estimate of $40,000 made by A. J. Stead, chief engineer of the water district, showing that the total cost for one of many small lots in the tract would be $23.30. The highest assessment, including interest, would be $25.55 for the first year for this class of lot.

The meeting adjourned to September 16, when the water board will make a report on a decision as to the proper procedure to follow, at their regular meeting to be held Thursday evening of this week at the Coast Royal tract office. Elmer L. Crawford of Coast Royal, president of the board, said it is probable that Engineer Stead will be instructed to proceed with a preliminary survey of the tract upon which a more exact estimate may be made. The board will consider, too, the possibility of getting possession of the distribution lines and reservoir of the Three Arches Mutual Water company, the only bone of contention in the improvement project. County Engineer Nat H. Neff and Supervisor George Jeffrey, at a recent conference, promised that the county will accept the improved streets for maintenance when they have been dedicated.

Opposition to the proposed improvement came from J. Cannon of Los Angeles, attorney for both

3000 MEN GIVEN JOBS IN HUNTINGTON BEACH FIELD; LOT OWNERS MAKE FORTUNES

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Sept. 4.—The boom in the town lot oil field has placed over 3000 men on jobs and has poured many thousands of dollars into the pockets of lot owners and holders of interests in wells here. The workers are averaging $5 a day.

Among those on whom fortune has bestowed success in this new oil boom here are Cecil Rood, J. F. McVickers, E. E. Fairbanks, Joe Rogers, J. E. Brain, Bob Morris, Jack Doyle, E. E. Combs, The Milton Oil company group of Long Beach oil supply house operators, P. A. Kingsland, Mr. Wold, pioneer oil operator and capitalist of Pasadena; Dr. Speik of Los Angeles; L. H. Bennigsdorf of Huntington Beach; Mr. Harris, pioneer real estate man of Santa Ana; Mr. Pauley of the Petrol Oil company; Sam Brooks, Anaheim rancher; Dick Lewis, Huntington Beach; Clayton Stevens, former tool pusher for Superior Oil company; Clyde DeWitte, Huntington Beach lot owner; J. Riggie, president of the Southern California Drilling company; Richards and Rowan, former clerks in the office of Hancock Oil company, Long Beach.

The list of those who have made modest fortunes will reach into the hundreds. So far the capital expended in the field has been ridiculously small compared with the huge value of the oil and gas production, oil operators say. Production running 60,000 barrels of oil a day, worth near $1 a barrel and a great many million cubic feet of gas, adding thousands more to the value of the daily production.

Tustin Class To Hold Weiner Bake

TUSTIN, Sept. 4.—The Friendship Bible class of the Presbyterian church will meet at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the beach cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Nissen, 117 Twenty-fifth street, Newport Beach, for a weiner bake. Those serving on the host committee are Mr. and Mrs. Nissen, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Gorton and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Ashcraft.

The Whiting company and Ford Collins, representative of the Bank of America, owners of the majority stock in the Three Arches Mutual Water company. After a rising vote had been called for by Chairman Bent and the vote had been declared unanimous, Cannon, who had stepped outside of the building, returned and asked that his negative vote be recorded on the minutes.

Attorney Cannon threatened litigation over any attempt to have streets dedicated to the county. It developed that the streets of the tract were not dedicated at the time the map was filed, but were designated as lots.

Col. M. B. Wellington, attorney for the water district, said it could be proved that they had been used for five years as streets and that a public dedication could be declared under the law. Cannon retorted that the subdividers reserved the right to dedicate the streets when they pleased.

LA HABRA'S NRA CAMPAIGN ENDED

LA HABRA, Sept. 4.—Captains and teams in the consumers NRA campaign report a 97 per cent sign up. Refusal of members of the Pentacostal church to sign kept the workers from making La Habra 100 per cent for the NRA, it was said.

L. H. Brewer, general chairman of the NRA in La Habra, states that he is well pleased with the work done by the workers in completing the work in so short a time.

Flames Destroy Garage At Beach

LAGUNA BEACH, Sept. 4.—Hundreds of visitors to the Festival of Arts were treated to a spectacle not on the program Saturday night when fire destroyed a double garage in the rear of 392 Coast Boulevard North, owned by Miss Mary L. Riker. High-mounting flames, reflected by a low-hanging fog bank, gave the impression of a much larger fire. The fire department, under Chief P. J. Rushman, made short work of the flames and saved several frame houses in close proximity from catching fire. Spontaneous combustion was given as the cause.

SAN CLEMENTE BOARD ADOPTS TAX ORDINANCE

SAN CLEMENTE, Sept. 4.—The ordinance setting the city tax rate at 90 cents, with $23,651.84 to be raised, was adopted by the city council Friday night. Interest of $2600 on water works bond will be raised by a 141-2 cent tax and $1340 interest on refunding bonds will be raised by 51-2 cent tax. The lighting district tax of $1.50 per lot. The total assessed valuation this year is $2,627,980, lowered from $3,500,000 last year.

Two parcels of land, deeded to the city by H. H. Cotton, were accepted. The land is 12 feet wide and located at the south end of the city, will be used for bridge path purposes.

A resolution was passed accepting a proposal by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, covering the construction of a passenger line beneath the bridge at San Clemente near the depot, and thanking the company for co-operation with the city. The agreement which Mayor Murphine will sign calls for the completion of the work before the camping season begins next year.

The commissioner of parks and playgrounds and the city attorney were authorized to arrange for the purchase or lease of a Toro Master A tractor for use at the golf course.

The golf club report for August showed a slight increase in business over the previous month. M. A. Cohen reported that 96 per cent of the players on the course come from out of town.

The recommendation by Fire Chief J. E. Hopkins of active firemen to be covered by compensation company was adopted. Those named were J. B. Hopkins, C. B. Wixom, Cliff Easley, Wendell Lovell, Alex Jimenez, Roland Peterson, Ralph Swigart and Tony Travaglioli.

By his request C. W. Wells was granted an unlimited leave of absence from the street department. The family is moving to Santa Ana. Wells is commander of American Legion post 331. His son, LeRoy Wells, completed the eighth grade work in June, will enter high school. The father and son are both musicians.

Application for the work given up by Wells were filed by Leo Smith and Ruhl Sited. Application for the night watchman job was placed by Henry L. Moore.

BANK PLAN TO BE EXPLAINED TO DEPOSITORS

BREA, Sept. 4.—Following approval by the comptroller of currency, Washington, D. C., of a plan for reopening the Oldfields National bank of Brea, Walker C. Davis, executive vice president of the bank, who for the past several months has been acting as conservator of the bank's affairs, announces a meeting of depositors of the bank for 7:30 p. m. Tuesday in the Masonic hall, following the five-day notice required by law.

The plan must receive the approval of a sufficient number of stockholders to cover 75 per cent of the deposits. If the proposed plan carries, the Brea bank will have the distinction of being the first bank on the west coast to open under the provisions of the Glass-Steagall banking act of 1933, providing for the national government guarantee of deposits.

Under the plan, the capital stock of the bank will be non-assessable and several other desirable points which are to be explained are expected to meet with the approval of the stockholders.

DIVIDEND PAID BY BEACH CITY BANK

NEWPORT BEACH, Sept. 4.—A dividend payment of 10 per cent on savings accounts and five per cent on commercial accounts has been made by the Bank of Balboa, making a total of 40 per cent in dividends on savings accounts and 20 per cent on commercial depositors. A total of $126,000 has been distributed.

According to Charles A. La Brea, special deputy superintendent of banks, further payments will be made "as soon as certain litigation involving thousands of dollars of public funds is settled."

LAGUNA BEACH RESIDENTS TO VOTE TOMORROW ON FORMATION OF NEW HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT

LAGUNA BEACH, Sept. 4.—An opportunity to solve the perplexing high school situation in this city will be offered tomorrow, when the citizens of Laguna Beach go to the polls to decide whether or not a high school district shall be organized with boundaries corresponding with those of the grammar school district.

If the vote favors the reforming of the district, which automatically lapsed on June 26 of this year, because a four-year course had not been offered, the trustees of the elementary school, who will serve both districts, will have until September, 1934, to establish such a course.

The election will be held at the grammar school and the polls will be open from noon to 6 p. m. It was called by Ray Adkinson, county superintendent of schools, following the filing of a petition signed by more than half of the heads of families in the district. Frank Brown will be inspector of the election and Mrs. C. A. Watkins and Mrs. Ralph Bell, judges.

The former high school district was formed in June, 1932, by a vote of the people, following the secession of the Laguna Beach district from the Tustin union high school district. A contract was made with the Tustin board of trustees to take care of the Laguna Beach students for a period of three years. That contract was declared null and void with the lapsing of the district in June. If the present election carries, the board can establish a course attended by an average of at least 10 pupils and the others can be contracted for at some other high school, until a plant is established in Laguna Beach large enough to take care of the 140 pupils.

Superintendent Adkinson has suggested that Miss Elba Johnson, head of a private school, establish such a course with the co-operation of the school board. Last year Miss Johnson had an average of nearly 10 pupils in high school grades in her own school.

The voters of Laguna Beach favored a high school district in a recent plebiscite conducted by the school board. However, G. B. Dunham, president of the board, is against the project. The district plan is being warmly supported by Mrs. A. B. Collins, another member of the board, as is the Parent-Teacher association. Leadership of the high school proponents has been taken by George E. Thompson, former clerk of the board. He is advocating use of the present grammar school for a high school plant, by the addition of a laboratory and proposes that small elementary schools be constructed in McKnight's addition and Arch Beach for the first six grades, the seventh and eighth grades to remain at present. This has been opposed by Durham.

If the election fails, Adkinson has indicated that he will again annex the Laguna Beach elementary district to Tustin.

NEWPORT MEN GO EAST FOR HARBOR FUNDS

NEWPORT BEACH, Sept. 4.—City Engineer C. L. Patterson and George A. Rodgers, president of the Union Rock company, left Saturday night for Washington, D. C., where they will seek $1-$35,000 in federal funds for harbor work.

Harbor plans include the extension of the west jetty 750 feet, the east jetty 920 feet, dredging of the entrance channel to a width of 500 feet and the county channel 200 feet, dredging of the turning basin and the dredging of 30 acres between Lido Isle and the Newport Harbor Yacht club.

A hearing was held in the Newport Beach city hall last July and plans for harbor improvements submitted to Major W. H. Langan, district engineer. Subsequently, the U. S. engineer's office made a favorable recommendation on development of a yacht harbor at Newport.

A hearing is scheduled to be held at Washington next Friday. A. B. Roussele, Santa Ana and Newport Beach capitalist, expects to meet Patterson and Rodgers in Washington.

Merchants Reveal Steady Gains In All Lines Of Trade

S. A. BUSINESS REPORTED ON UPWARD TREND

According to a business survey just completed in Santa Ana by the Santa Ana Merchants' Association the general trend is upward, it was reported today by A. Cavalli, manager. The survey covered every business, he declared.

In his report Cavalli said "While the general trend is upward some of the specialty shops did not do the amount of business they expected. This condition, however, has always existed during the summer months and there is no cause for dissatisfaction.

"The local buying situation is steadily improving and now during this period of construction we must not expect too much of our business. The pendulum is swinging the other way, our merchants are buying new fall and winter stocks and paying higher prices for them and the buying public will soon come to realize that the "Buy in September" campaign is not just a piece of propaganda to stimulate business, but is based on common sense.

"We are expecting real activity in this section of the country within the next three months and local merchants are preparing accordingly."

At the business meeting the president announced the appointment of Mrs. Anna C. Lawler, Mrs. Edith Hoskins and Mrs. Violet Taylor as aides under the new department president.

BLUE EAGLE BOOMS LABOR'S CAUSE

Bargaining By Workers Is Approved

By RODNEY DUTCHER
Register Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—The American labor movement, crippled by the depression, has suddenly become a potentially powerful force.

It has gained great new strength through the National Recovery Act and through official action and policies compelled both by the act and the logic of events.

Whether labor's leaders are competent to take advantage of their guaranteed opportunities for collective bargaining and union organization remains to be seen.

But numerous tangible improvements in labor's status—since it was formally admitted as a "partner" with government and industry—offer an amazing contrast with its position last spring, after years of wage cuts and mounting unemployment.

Establishment of a National Labor board to settle industrial disputes means that Uncle Sam will see to it that labor receives the collective bargaining rights guaranteed by the act.

When employers refuse to bargain with employees, the latter can bargain before the board. Hard-boiled corporations can't interfere with union organization or force employees into controlled company unions.

Already, in ending several strikes, the board has established collective bargaining under its own supervision. Secret elections are held under authority of NLRB whose representatives can watch to see that there is no intimidation.

SUMMARY OF GAINS

Here is a summary showing some of labor's other gains: The act was based on one of labor's cherished theories—that the first requisite to prosperity is purchasing power, which must be maintained by adequate wages and full employment. Labor had urged the shorter working week, which became a vital part of the new national plan.

The NRA set-up placed outstanding labor leaders on a labor advisory board—on a par with an industrial board—and gave them voice in the final integration of all industry's codes of fair competition.

Labor has partly put its own house in order since it was compelled to present a united front here. NRA machinery enabled it to settle the 20-year jurisdictional fight between the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the United Garment Workers—an event of great significance. The American Federation of Labor was crowded into reversing its policy against the dual union.

Several NRA codes have the names of unions written into them and some provide that whatever arrived at shall be considered part of the code. Some code authorities—governing boards on code matters—include union men, who can look at the books of the employers and check up on their reports.

Child labor has been doomed in industry through its prohibition in all codes.

Madame Secretary Helps
Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, appeared as a champion of labor when she publicly urged higher wages, shorter hours and better conditions than were provided in the steel code.

The NRA has forced the steel and other anti-union industries to withdraw sections of their codes which would have given federal sanction to the company union system.

Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania set a precedent in that great industrial state by sending militia to protect coal strikers from local officials and armed company police.

The NRA completely reversed its policy when Administrator Johnson, who had previously insisted he couldn't intervene in a labor dispute where the industry wasn't under a code, mediated the Pennsylvania coal strike. Coal companies were made to accept the miners' demand for their own check weighmen and to agree to submit disputes to a federal board.

"Shop Committees" Formed
An amendment to the cotton textile code, the principle of which is applicable to other codes, sets up machinery for collective bargaining in each factory, with provision for appeal to state and national boards.

Labor leaders think this virtually opens the door for union organization in each plant. The "shop committee" system of dealing with management may now be established in any unorganized mill.

Although the A. F. of L. has been criticized for failure to make an energetic organization drive, there have been some real gains in union membership.

President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, who began an early, vigorous campaign, claims around 300,000 new members. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers have organized more than 30,000 new members since the act went into effect.

The A. F. of L. has issued 200 new charters and has been willing to organize industrial unions as well as trade or craft unions.

Labor consciousness has also been awakened, as demonstrated by a series of strikes which usually have involved the issue of union recognition.

Problems Lie Ahead
The movement is still weak numerically in organized strength and has none too many able leaders.

The steel, bituminous coal, automobile and other unorganized or semi-organized industries will fight the unions as much as they dare. Code-making is in the hands of the industries and sympathetic deputy administrators. Many disputes seem certain in cases where the wages above the minimum schedules are not raised.

Rising prices may offset increases in low wages and leave many more highly paid workers worse off than they were before. Some labor experts fear that the unions may be brought under a degree of federal control which will restrict their freedom of action.

MAYOR URGES OPENING OF SOUTH MAIN

Discussing road improvement projects and their effect upon the economic life of the county, Mayor Paul Witmer today voiced the hope that the proposed extension of South Main street, across the Irvine ranch property, to Corona Del Mar, would receive the immediate attention of the state highway commission and the county supervisors.

"There is no road improvement project that would do more good to Santa Ana's business interests than the South Main street extension," the mayor said, explaining that the realization of the project would divert a profitable motor travel traffic through this city.

Calling attention to the present development in Laguna Beach, which, he said, has already attracted the attention of Los Angeles and Long Beach business men, Mayor Witmer thought it was time for Santa Ana business interests to lay plans for making this city the nearest trade center for the growing art colony.

General assembly in auditorium—7:30 p. m. Devotions: Rev. Grover C. Ralston, Garden Grove; summary of reports from afternoon conference: Dr. George Warner, Address, Dr. James E. Dunning, recently of Pacific Palisades, now pastor, Orange Methodist church.

ASK DONATION OF PIANO FOR USE AT CONSERVATION CAMP

Who has a piano to lend or give away?

It need not be a concert grand, nor even in perfect condition, but a piano that will serve to make music, one that has all or most of its keys, strings and hammers, and which will respond to kindly treatment, is greatly needed at the Conservation Camp at Capistrano Hot Springs, according to word received at the Y. M. C. A. today.

There are several pretty good musicians among the young men in the camp, and if they can get hold of some sort of instrument that can be used, it will be of tremendous help in their camp life, in putting on their own programs and in furnishing accompaniments for the singers who go from time to time to put on entertainments for them, it is reported.

The boys believe that some generous citizen of Santa Ana may have an old piano that is fit for use which he will be willing to donate for the good of the cause, hence the appeal.

Anyone who is willing to respond may call the Y. M. C. A. office, phone 96, or the Register office, Phone 29, and arrangements will be made for a truck from the camp to pick up the instrument.

Christian Science

"He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" These words of Micah were the Golden Text in the lesson-sermon on "Man" yesterday at the Santa Ana branch of the Mother Church, First Church of Christ, Scientist.

One of the Bible citations from Mark, speaking of Jesus, said in part: "And there came a leper to Him, beseeching Him, and kneeling down to Him, and saying unto Him, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth His hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean. And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed."

Among the passages from the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, was the statement: "Jesus beheld in science the perfect man, who appeared to Him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick."

Fantastic Picture Opens At Walker's

"King Kong," a fantastic story of a prehistoric ape of skyscraper stature, captured by puny man and breaking loose and wreaking havoc after being brought to New York City for exhibition, comes to Walker's State theater Tuesday for a three day showing.

Featured players of the production, which has many hair-raising moments during the jungle scenes incident to the capture of the huge beast which is worshipped by a tribe of natives, and again during its escapades in New York with a beautiful girl, whose beauty casts a spell over the beast, are Fay Wray, Robert Armstrong and Bruce Cabot.

Family Shares Dinner Honoring Wedding Anniversary

Fifty-five years ago today Ann Vandermast and Miss Abbie Newell were married in Newton, Iowa, and in celebration of that event, Mrs. Vandermast entertained Friday evening with a family affair in their home, 425 South Birch street.

At 6:30 o'clock a tempting menu was served at a large table whose centerpiece of red carnations and ferns was softly lighted by tall red tapers. Dainties and other flowers had been arranged throughout the rooms to provide an effective setting for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Vandermast were presented with many handsome gifts. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Walter Vandermast, Mr. and Mrs. Walter N. Prince and son, Kenneth; Mr. and Mrs. Murray Vandermast; Mrs. Laura Leonard and Miss Pore.

The Vandermasts lived in Ames, Iowa, before coming here about 30 years ago to make their home, since when Mr. Vandermast has been one of the city's leading business men, and Mrs. Vandermast has been equally prominent in club and social circles.

Hospitality of Four Homes Extended For Dinner

Young people taking part in a progressive dinner party Friday night were first entertained in the home of Miss Dorothy Van Deusen, 724 Oak street, where a cocktail course was served. French bouquets were used in decorating.

From here, the group went to the home of Miss Fern Berkner, 2341 Riverside drive for a delicious salad course. Marigolds decked the home for the occasion.

For the main course, guests had been invited to the home of Miss Green Griffin, 1004 Kilson drive, where asters were the blooms chosen for decorating. Miss Julian Wolven was hostess at the final feature, a tempting dessert served in her home, 233 East Bishop street.

The group spent the remainder of the evening attending a local theater.

Sharing the affair with the hostess group, the Misses Dorothy Van Deusen, Fern Berkner, Gwen Griffin and Julian Wolven, were Messrs. Russell Abbey, Bain Alexander, Jack Schilling and De-mont Galbreth.

Two Affairs Celebrate Couple's First Anniversary

The first wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gunn, 1317 West Walnut street, was observed at two affairs given the past week, the latest of which took place Friday evening at Anaheim park, where a family group had been brought together.

This occasion served as well to observe the 24th wedding anniversary of Mrs. Gunn's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Grant of Glendora. Mrs. Gunn, who will be remembered as Miss Martha Kuffel, acted as hostess at the outdoor celebration.

A picnic dinner was served at long tables brightened with giant orange and yellow marigolds. Served with the last course of the menu was a tiered wedding cake, the first slices of which were cut by Mrs. Gunn and Mrs. Grant.

The honor guests received many gifts. Those taking part in the affair were Mrs. Gunn's parents, brother and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Kuffel, Mark Kuffel and Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Cole, this city; Mr. and Mrs. George Kuffel and son Schuyler, Long Beach; Mr. and Mrs. F. Best, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Best and family, Pasadena; Miss Mary Kuffel, Miss Marie Grant, Glendora; Mrs. Grant, Pomona; Miss Ethel Richards, Fullerton; and the anniversary celebrants, Mr. and Mrs. Gunn of this city and Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Grant, Glendora.

Dinner Party
An earlier affair complimenting Mr. and Mrs. Gunn was given by the former's grandmother, Mrs. Anna Gunn, who was hostess at a dinner party in her home in Monrovia. Roses were her decorations.

The hostess took this opportunity of presenting her special gift to the young people. This proved to be a framed tinted enlargement of Mr. and Mrs. Gunn, taken on their wedding day a year ago.

Those present were the hostess, Mrs. Anna Gunn, Mr. and Mrs. Gunn, the honor guests, Mr. Gunn's father, Earl Gunn, of Monrovia, and Miss Marie Grant of Glendora. The latter spent a few days here as a houseguest of the Carl Gunns.

Christian Science Lecture Belivered Here Sunday

The following lecture entitled "Christian Science: Its Case Against Superstition" was delivered Sunday afternoon at First Church of Christ, Scientist, in the church edifice at Tenth and Main Streets, by Dr. John M. Tuttle, C. S. B. of Kansas City, Missouri. Dr. Tuttle is a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 83), the author, Mary Baker Eddy, declares, "Between Christian Science and all forms of superstition a great gulf is fixed, as impassable as that between Dives and Lazarus." The attempt to bridge that chasm between the false and the true may be said to be the error of the ages. It largely occupies humanity today, and is the prolific source of mortal man's embroilment with the "deceitfulness of unrighteousness."

RELIGION AND SUPERSTITION

Throughout material history religion has been compromised and complicated by superstition. Even the Christian religion has suffered from vain endeavors to amalgamate the Dives of false material beliefs with the Lazarus of spiritual facts; and thus Christianity and Christ have been hampered, and misled by irrational and foolish or idle practices. The religious instinct is, too often, mankind's concession of its own insufficiency. Soon or late every mortal recognizes and acknowledges that inadequacy. Religion is a bowing before a power, outside human self, and an adoration of it, or else a fear of it. One yields to a stronger power only through love or fear. The fear is firmly grounded in the false gods, for the worshiping of idols brings disastrous consequences upon their worshippers. Religion, acknowledging as it does, that power of God, outside one's self, calls for faith as well as reason. One's reason may tell one there is such a power; one's belief about that power may be a faith in good, or in evil, or a mixture of both. When the religious belief is replaced by perception or understanding, faith is glorified into truth, truth is knowledge of facts, truths. Superstition is that which stands outside facts. Hence, superstition is always to be reckoned as false belief. Belief in the unknown is superstitious, as St. Paul indicated when he declared to the men of Athens, "I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious;" or, as the Revised Version has it, "very religious." Paul thus correctly estimated the Athenian religion, because he had observed their state toward the unknown God. Superstition and false religious beliefs are inseparable and are one, because superstition is always a false belief in a power outside one's self, over which one has no control, and of which one has no understanding. The false belief may be one of good or of evil, but all ignorant, or non-understanding, beliefs are superstitions. Against all forms of superstition Christian Science thunders this omnipotent fact: Neither God nor His creation is inscrutable! No truth is past finding out.

THE GREAT INSIGHT OF MARY BAKER EDDY

This was the great insight of Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science; that true religion is the search for, and the understanding of absolute good. God and His manifestation, man and the universe; that God, cause, producing intelligent acts, must be divine Mind; that since it is the sole province of Mind to know, God's creation must be comprised in His thoughts alone; that, therefore, all real existence is divinely mental; hence a finite creation, or a world of matter, including mortal man, must lie outside the realm of reality; it must be falsely hypothetical, a misstatement or misunderstanding of the facts of being. So, on the one side, Mrs. Eddy found true religion, and on the other, false religious beliefs, or superstitions. And as in the Bible she found the spiritual revelation of the truth about God and man, even so from the Scriptures she discovered the efficacy of the idea of Truth, Christ, to correct the misunderstanding, the misstatement, and so to save mortal man from the dire effects of evil and its inevitable superstitious beliefs. Through the healing of her own physical disorders solely by spiritual means, she discovered and made plain to human understanding the full gospel of Christ, healing and preventing sin, sickness, discord, and evil. Do you wonder that Christian Science loves Mrs. Eddy? Consider that she has thrown the beam of Truth into the dense darkness and superstition of their former lives, and has initiated for them the establishment of the kingdom of heaven on earth, the forever unfolding of eternal bliss, life unfeared. Through the crystal clarity of her spiritual-mindedness and the purity of her life, the whole world is experiencing the enlightenment of understanding. As superstition fades the world is joyfully proclaiming, In the words of Jesus, "We know that we worship."

THE UNIVERSALITY OF RELIGION

Superstitions, then, broadly speaking, partake of the nature of false religion, whether or not they are admittedly so. Also we conclude that all false beliefs are superstitions. According to the Bible, the whole of actual existence is comprised in God and His creation, for St. John declares that "without him was not any thing made." Christian Science reveals that a right understanding of God is religion in the absolute. Outside that absoluteness all is superstition or false beliefs. Indeed it is itself an absurdity to imagine an outside of the infinite omnipresence, the all-inclusive God.

Human life, so called, is a seeming mingling of true religion and superstition in varying degrees of individual human consciousness, an evolution of false beliefs out of themselves, a disappearance of them as the enlightenment from the coming of Truth, Christ, goes on. Thus, as in the parable Jesus told, the material riches of Dives become poverty, utter lack, in the illumination of spiritual sense, whilst the material poverty of Lazarus is replaced by the affluence of spirituality. And so in Christian Science all human life, in its varied activities, becomes religious. All human living and doing is glorified into Christian endeavor, and even the most mental tasks prove opportunities to let Lazarus, spirituality, be magnified, and Dives, the type of superstitious beliefs, be minimized, reduced even to the point of disappearance. Reducing evil to such a point is possible because evil is essentially nothing, a mere negation of good.

GROSS SUPERSTITION OBSOLETE

Whether we are students of Christian Science or not, we probably pride ourselves on a lack of superstition. And indeed it is true that we may have quite abandoned the simpler forms. We perhaps feel no fear of walking under a ladder, or spilling salt on the table, or seating thirteen at dinner, or undertaking a journey on Friday the thirteenth. Although we may deplore the breaking of a mirror, we do not expect from it seven years of bad luck; and to encounter a black cat sends no chilling premonition of evil up our spines. We are quite free of all such false beliefs and may even incline to feel superior to those not so enlightened. Are we not likely to assure ourselves: Thank God, I am not superstitious? But wait—pride goeth before a fall! To avoid that fall let us take account of our positions, lest having rid ourselves of the grosser forms of superstition we may neglect to deal with the refinements or subtler phases thereof.

MORE SUBTLE ASPECTS OF SUPERSTITION

Israelitish history, as unfolded in the pages of the Bible, may be considered a relation of the warfare between Science and superstition. Again and again were the people turned, by wise kings, from the evils of superstition into which they had been plunged by foolish kings, and into which they were led by inter-marriage with the heathen round about. These reformers tore down the idols and reinstated true religion. But the groves and high places, representing the most subtle forms of superstition, the refinements of superstition, were usually left, even by the best of the kings. In the laconic language of the Scriptures: "Howbeit the high places were not taken away; as yet the people did sacrifice and burnt incense on the high places." Jeremiah, cries in indignation, "Hast thou seen that which backsliding Israel hath done? she is gone upon every high mountain and under every green tree, and there hath played the harlot." And thus the elements of weakness remained to break their morale in times of enemy attack, causing repeated defeats and captivities. We need earnestly to consider whether we are not also retaining the groves and high places, where we turn from the true Science of Christ to adulterous beliefs, worshipping them as did the faithless Israelites, under every green tree. Science and Health tells us (p. 167) that "only through radical reliance on Truth can scientific healing power be realized." Paul had against him, before King Agrippa, what Governor Festus himself said were only accusations of the Jews out of their own superstitions. Yet Paul appealed to Caesar and thus forfeited his freedom. For after hearing Paul himself present his case, King Agrippa declared to Festus, "This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed unto Caesar." And so every mortal is prone to have a superstition to which he turns, in times of stress, instead of clinging steadfastly to Truth. Mrs. Eddy once said that the great need was for "inflexible practitioners." These superstitions may be adopted out of the great storehouse of mortal beliefs, or may be adaptations peculiar to one's self—no matter which—for they are, one and all, decoys of the carnal mind, deflecting human consciousness from the safety of the universal and all-inclusive and inevitable good.

"THE GREAT TRANSGRESSION"

In the nineteenth Psalm, David asks: "Who can understand his errors? cleanse thou me from secret faults. Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me; then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression." We may consider that secret faults are ignorant, unconscious and involuntary error, or as Mrs. Eddy has termed it, animal magnetism, or mesmerism; whilst presumptuous sins are malicious, conscious and voluntary animal magnetism, or mesmerism. According to the Scriptures, secret faults and presumptuous sins constitute for each individual the great transgression. Mrs. Eddy's general classification of error as ignorant and malicious, involuntary and voluntary, unconscious and conscious, needs no additions; nor is evil properly susceptible of further classification. The following subdivisions are not meant to enlarge upon the kinds of mesmerism so completely covered by the Christian Science textbook; they are more to the nature of analytical illustrations, and are discussed here because they are properly to be catalogued as superstitions which Christian Science destroys. The subdivisions, touching as they do, on certain aspects of material psychology, or the workings of the human mind, show the counterfeit character of psychology as taught in the schools, in contrast to true psychology, or the Science of divine Mind and its ideas, as taught in Christian Science.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VERSUS ANIMAL MAGNETISM

Here let me say that Mrs. Eddy did not originate the term "animal magnetism." Many thinkers of her day, and prior to her time, wrote on the subject. But she alone saw that animal magnetism, and its synonymous terms such as mesmerism, hypnotism, thought transference, mental suggestions, needed to be exposed as false, superstitious beliefs in order to free humanity from the dire effects of belief in them as realities. For that important reason Mrs. Eddy dealt with animal magnetism, but only to expose its falsity, and denounce it as powerless and unreal. Thus she alone has dealt with animal magnetism adequately. Throughout her writings she has repudiated the false belief that evil has power to be anything, or to do anything, and has held to the great fact in the Science of Being, that omnipresent and omnipotent good means no presence and no power to evil.

GENERAL AND INDIVIDUAL BELIEFS

We should bear in mind always that all superstitions are false beliefs, even as all false beliefs are superstitions. They are held primarily in universal mortal mind and are both general and individual. Individual beliefs are illustrations of general or universal beliefs even though they may seem particular to the individual. In so far as the individual is concerned, his beliefs, although always adapted from general mortal mind, are peculiarly his own. Hence no two individuals think exactly alike. Nevertheless all erroneous concepts are related, being "chips of the old block," mortal mind. And affinity, attraction, and consanguinity are universal and individual false beliefs. Thus is established another old saw, "Birds of a feather flock together."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VERSUS CONSCIENTIOUS BELIEFS

We may conceive of general beliefs as the composite thought of mortals, agreeing in common consent. Again, we may have the particular consent of the individual to a so-called law of mortal mind. Thus we have what Mrs. Eddy terms "consentaneous" human belief (Science and Health, p. 553). The real man is acquainted only with good and consents only to the action of good. In Christian Science we learn that our immediate privilege and duty is to withdraw our individual consent to illusive mass beliefs and to demand our right of original thought and independent action. We must increasingly be in disagreement with wrong methods and evil conditions imposed upon us through our conscious or tacit consent. In all too many tragic instances are we consenting unto the death of Christ, Truth, in our consciousness, and so living in the deep darkness of superstitious belief in the inevitableness and the action of evil. Christian Science teaches that no evil can befall us without our individual consent. Withdrawal of consent is immunity from all evil. Such escape is full—the conclusive evidence of withholding of consent. So, for example, we may escape contagion and epidemics, which Mrs. Eddy describes as "common consent" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 235). And so we may free peace and plenty where, in the mesmerism of consentaneous beliefs, strife and want may seem to abound.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VERSUS CUSTOMARY BELIEFS

Closely allied to consentaneous belief is "customary belief" (Science and Health, p. 229) which in the Christian Science textbook is termed "misnamed material law." Science and Health also declares, "Custom, education, and fashion form the transient standards of mortals" (p. 247). Customary beliefs are, then, transient, which fact is indeed comforting to us when we consider how difficult it may seem to break from tradition, or to break from the hardization of thought and conduct. Some hotels post signs in bathrooms with the legend: "This bathroom is standardized." How significant of the legend of our lives! We are customized and conventionalized, often helplessly subservient to the decrees of fashion in thought, religion, business, medicine, ethics, and ideals. Even our clothes are too often prescribed by custom, and we are prescribed thereby from independence and spontaneity, without which human life is tragically indeed. Such things may be less important, but consider the imperative necessity to break with the customary beliefs called laws of matter, which bind mortals to the superstitions of sin, disease, discord, and even death. Christian Science reveals that man has the God-given power to think and act for himself. That freedom of thought and action is his recourse when confronted by the superstition of customary beliefs.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VERSUS ASSOCIATIVE BELIEFS

Consider, now, another phase of belief, that man is more or less governed by the association of thoughts and things; that he remembers one thing, or thought, by its association with or relation to another. Material psychology terms this "association by similarity or semblance of mental impressions, and by continuity or relation of time and place." Note that false psychology takes no note of the fact that human memory is not a function of the real Mind. Divine Mind already knows, and to the divine Mind there is no past or future. He therefore does not need to recall. Doing things by the psychoanalyst methods of material psychology is not intelligent conduct. It is animal magnetism, and is based on chemical reactions. The dog, cat, bird, and flea are trained by associative animal magnetism—a sequence of animal impulses, and so considered, their performance is not a display of intelligence. Even so, much of the habitual conduct and thought of human beings is associative animal magnetism. Uninstructed by divine Science we incline to think and to do things mechanically because of associated sequences of thought and events and material objects.

This deadly mechanization Christian Science opposes. It heals humanity of living stereotyped lives. It shows the truly scientific association of all ideas, their mutual relation, correlation and interrelation in divine Mind. By its appeal to divine intelligence it brings to human life spontaneity and originality of thought and action.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VERSUS SUGGESTIVE BELIEFS

Another form of error's superstitions presentment is mental suggestions. They may be unconscious or aggressive. Aggressive suggestions are likely to be malicious. They are always active and obtrusive. Mental suggestions are error's claim that evil can present itself specifically to human consciousness as self's own thought and so determine action. Thus even as the cow bird lays her eggs in the nest of another bird, error claims to deposit itself in one's mentality; and so the suggestion represents itself to be legitimate as one's own thought and action. Suggestion, superstition versus inspiration. It is corporeal impulse against intuition. It opposes the one clear call of intelligence, and man's singleness of ear to hear that call. Mental suggestions oppose the inspired words of Mrs. Eddy (Christian Science Hymnal, No. 304): "I will listen for Thy voice, Lest my footsteps stray."

Always the object of suggestions is to render one incapable, or uncertain of the call of wisdom, and to listen for Thy voice. That one clear call for you will ring out over the confused noises of superstitious suggestions. "I will follow and rejoice." The one clear call in any case is to maintain the facts of being against the lies of animal magnetism. This is our call, and Truth, Christ, is the hope of our calling. To be conscious of the truth regarding any lie is to eradicate that lie, and to strike a blow at all error.

"Through the harsh noises of our day, A low sweet prelude finds its way" (Hymnal, No. 238).

Spiritual alertness and activity are the antidote for mental suggestions. With right motives one will be divinely impelled, and certainly, thus minded, one must be correct in the majority of one's acts.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VERSUS BELIEFS OF ATTRACTION

The attraction of divine Love which holds all ideas in relation, correlation, and interrelation, in coincidence with divine Mind and with themselves, is counterfeited in mortal mind by the attraction of matter for itself. This erroneous hypothesis is based on false attraction. Therefore, in belief, certain human mentalities may meet; and when the influence is wholesome the contact blesses one and all. Such contacts are desirable and may establish the brotherhood of man. Such contacts offer opportunity for the realization of the truth spoken in Mrs. Eddy's beautiful verse (Hymnal, No. 253): "My prayer, some daily good to do, To Thine, for Thee."

Christian Scientists may allow their contacts between themselves, with the world, and bless all they touch. We cannot avoid the world's contacts, nor need we wish to. Jesus prayed for his own, not that they should be taken out of the world, but that they be kept from the evil. Christian Science has come to reconcile our contacts with our fellow men; to take away beliefs of false attraction; to replace them with spiritual-mindedness, compassion, love, kindness, consideration, unselfishness. The practice of Christian Science is synonymous with service. We must learn to touch the hearts of our fellow men to higher issues only. Thus nothing is lost and all is gained, and that is Christian Science. Unhallowed by Science, human life is beset by erroneous belief of attraction, and the way out is through prayer and demonstration: There is a time for all human acts and conditions, and they terminate duly. Pray for that intuition which marks the coincidence of the human with the divine, and reveals the hour and the way both for every procedure and for every deed. We need to bear in mind Jesus' example; he was always guided by unerring wisdom. Mortal mind strove ceaselessly to set up destructive influences, but Jesus poured the oil of spiritual love and healing into his human relationships, and when another's unresponsiveness made the contact apparently fruitless, after he went all the miles, he turned to more fruitful endeavor, as he counseled his fellow man to do. But he first went all the miles. Mrs. Eddy, likewise, as a true follower of the Master, went all the miles. Even so, let us be sure that we go all the miles. Even though we are led to sever the contact where misunderstanding and irritation persist, nevertheless we should impersonalize the seeming source of error, and remember that the person or thing, in any such case, is but a decoy of mortal mind to cover its intent to destroy, through hate and fear of its fellow man. Oftentimes we may, by destroying erroneous influences, turn hatred into love, enmity into friendship. But if not, then let us remember that the world is wide, and there is room for all to live and act. Remember that if, finally, we have thus to turn from individuals and leave them to God and the logic of events, evil's seeming attachment to persons is destroyed in our thought, is wholly overbalanced, by Love's attraction for good; and harmonious relationships of true service and cooperation will be demonstrated. There is always compensation for any seeming loss; indeed there is no loss, no breaking of relationship is the unity of being which is God and man, Mind and its ideas.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VERSUS FRAUDULENT BELIEFS

That man can be deceived, tricked, imposed upon, cheated, is another of the superstitions saddled upon the human race by mortal mind and from which Christian Science saves mortal man. Fraudulent beliefs are deceptions practiced to gain unlawful or unfair advantages. They come up in many aspects of human life, and are especially so in the business world. A belief is prone to be strong that wrong methods are desirable or necessary. These decoys promise gain, or escape from loss, embarrassment, or punishment. They even claim that success in business is impossible without dishonesty. Actually, they draw one's attention from the disaster inescapably associated with mortal mind's activities, and unless themselves circumvented, snare the unwary. Such beliefs would be found so even in human consciousness and body. But for material self-knowledge, for delving into body, and theories of pathology and physiology, one may pay the price of physical health and comfort and be immeasurably the loser thereby.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VERSUS POSSESSIVE BELIEFS

Processive beliefs are superstitions based on the false hypothesis that man can possess or be possessed by a person, a demon, a passion, a corporeal impulse, or a wrong motive. Possessive beliefs are demonic, because they operate to enslave. The beliefs that one can be subject to another person, or be enslaved by false appetites, drugs, evil practices, and habits, these are decoys of possessive animal magnetism. All forms of slavery are resultant from the entertainment of possessive beliefs. And there is only one cure, namely self-possession, that is, self-government and self-control under divine Principle. To possess one's self is to put to rout all the claims of selfish gain or exclusive property rights. The qualities of divine Mind are the common possession of all God's children; and possession, in all good, is proper interpretation of man, for he literally has, by reflection, all that the Father has, dominion over all—even over himself. Thus to control or keep one's self is to relieve others of the necessity of keeping one. So self-possession destroys false responsibility of others towards us and of us towards others. "Am I my brother's keeper?" asked Cain. And Christian Science answers yes, and no. By helping ourselves, the possibilities of helping others are released for his service. We help our brother, then, first by keeping ourselves, by relieving him of the necessity to care for us, and secondly, by unselfed service of our brother. Self-care is highest unselfishness. Actually God's man is self-sufficient, by virtue of his expression of the All-sufficiency. All things must be earned to be possessed. Many earn his self-sufficiency, even as he earns his happiness and freedom by his expression of unselfed service. Waiting, Micawber-like, for something to turn up, is a superstition based on the belief of possessing something "for nothing." It is a denial of God's law of compensation. It denies the fact that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." And without sowing there is no reaping. Mrs. Eddy tells us (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 307), "God gives you His spiritual ideas, and in turn, they give you daily supplies." The right sense of possession fills our lives with gratitude and unselfishness, but our Leader has warned us that "we cannot conceal the ingratitude of barren lives" (Science and Health, p. 4). Gratitude is the true sense of possession and is expressed properly in unselfed, productive, self-controlled, well-kept lives.

POPULAR SUPERSTITIONS OF THE DAY

Instances of the various forms of erroneous beliefs may be noted in some of the popular superstitions of today, many of which have come down from yesterday. One of these superstitions is that man is a machine. We are repeatedly, and sometimes heatedly, reminded by the health authorities and enthusiasts, that although we take the best of care of our automobiles, and animals, we are prone to neglect our bodies. Our government is urged to compel us to care for our bodies according to the formulas of medical, hygienic, and sanitary superstitions of today. Yet that man is a machine is a rank superstition. Such a claim ignores mental identity and the fact that the body is properly subject to the thought of the individual, and actually is a mobile product thereof. Each mortal embodies his thought, and he thinks himself ill or well, in human belief, and thus he is a law to himself. He may change that belief of sickness into one of health and back again, and no amount or kind of treatment can reach his body except through his thought. Christian Science evolves all that error of belief, or of its claim to existence. Christian Science reveals the fact that the divine intelligence, holding man eternally in perfection, acts on the human body by correcting the false beliefs, and thus excludes disease, fatigue, wear, and tear. So the body is restored to normality. Reflecting divine law, every man becomes a law of good alone to himself, and in that enlightenment he routs superstition.

Another popular superstition is the slogan of the public health propagandist. Health is purchasable. Health is, literally, wholesome, or completeness, and is the expression of man's mind and functioning. Man remains always well, because God remains so. That completeness and unchangeableness is the law of exclusion to disease; hence the impossibility of man being sick. By this same law of exclusion of error mortal man is saved from and healed of sickness, by the realization of the all-inclusiveness of health. Health is then, not purchased or purchasable—it is not a commodity; it is the forever fact, and need only be acknowledged and realized to be found so even in human consciousness and body. But for material self-knowledge, for delving into body, and theories of pathology and physiology, one may pay the price of physical health and comfort and be immeasurably the loser thereby.

ANOTHER MEDICAL SUPERSTITION

The popular refrain, "A clean tooth never decays." Thus the unwary is deceived into following the decoy of physical hygiene to the exclusion of handling the real enemy of the tooth, mortal mind. While it is true that a genuine Christian Scientist will keep his body clean, just as he will cleanse his body and clothing and be scrupulous in his warfare against all forms of dirt, yet he will be equally wise in handling the mercurial beliefs of whatever sort; which superstitions alone, not dirt, cause the decay. He will refuse to agree that teeth decay from dirt, or from chemical reaction, or from poisons generated by his organization of food stuffs, from too much or too little of this or that. He will wisely center his fire on the old enemy, mortal mind, working mesmerically in human consciousness, under cover of decoys such as "a clean tooth never decays." He needs only note the proverbially perfect white teeth of the native African, and other aborigines, who certainly are not in a position to see their dentists twice a year and the case of the white inhabitants of the South Atlantic Islands, Tristan da Cunha, where a recent survey disclosed that their teeth brushed, decayed teeth, and dental faddists were unknown.

There is a widespread superstition that, except for conduct of health, Truth is sent out by mortal mind to induce one to concede to the superstition as a mortal law dangerous to ignore. The victim does not realize that it is far more dangerous to give it the power of law than to ignore it. The wise Christian Scientist will neither concede it as law nor ignore its false claims. He will take no exercise as such, but will be normally active in pursuit of his intent. He will use his legs and feet for their evident purpose, namely, to convey him. He will walk, or play, for the sheer joy of recreation, or he will walk when he needs to do so, but never with the thought that he is thus operating under or complying with laws of health. A survey of the teaching force in a certain great university revealed that the sedentary, desk, and laboratory workers enjoyed the best health, and notably, by far the longest span of life.

Another superstition, deep set in human belief, is that climate is harmful or is healthful. Indeed, in certain localities it might not be healthful for one to deny the latter superstition, since the inhabitants set such store by it! And yet beneficiaries of a favorable climate—and certainly it is more pleasant to live in certain places, even though not necessarily more profitable—need to be alert that they be not decoyed into acknowledging false law, and thus be deflected from the great fact that true health is universal, an idea which, even as all ideas, is everywhere present. Unless one finds health in right thinking one will never find it in location. But the consciousness of health within one will destroy the superstition relating to climate. Then one may, not improperly, seek a climate to one's liking.

Again, a popular superstition holds that environment determines character and conduct. This decoy would drag one down into the mire of helplessness and helplessness, and set every where present to a lie of mortal mind. There is nothing wholesome or curative in merely observing that men seem often to be the product of their surroundings. Not agreement with superstitions, but the breaking of them, is Christian Science.

Here consider another similar belief, namely, that intelligence and character are dependent on the size of the brain and the shape of the head. Phrenology they call that superstition. Quite an elaborate system has been built up on this ignorant belief. One has only to come upon notable exceptions to repudiate the whole theory. Allied superstitions are that evil, including disease and sin, is hereditary; that one may inherit either disease itself or a liability to it; again, that one may have an evil destiny, good or bad luck, be subject to chance. All these are the products of ignorance, and properly to be catalogued as superstitions. Further medical superstitions are that certain foods appear to be few foods indeed omitted from the catalogue of the forbidden. And, finally, that while fresh air is necessary to health, drafts conduce to taking cold. In all such superstitions the so-called laws are easily disproved by exceptions. They are thus revealed, not as laws requiring obedience, but as customary beliefs requiring only our vigorous and uncompromising protests to make them inoperable. We need only disbelieve in them.

Some other ancient and modern superstitions are palmistry, fortune telling, and numerology. Coming down from the beginning of mortal history, these false beliefs are more than generally realized. One of the oldest superstitions of the human race is astrology. Perhaps "the high places" were significant as advantageous locations for outlook upon the stars and for outlook upon the stars and most primitive of religions. Today astrology is more generally believed in than one would suppose from our boasted enlightenment. To what extent it influences the lives of some contemporary mortals may be reckoned by the prevalence of the daily horoscope in newspapers and on radio programs. The belief that their lives are predestined, inclined, or compelled by the stars is strong in multitudes, who conduct themselves accordingly. The astrologer of today, as of old, imagines he reads in the stars the fate of human beings, but the soothsayer sees his own thoughts, and the victim consents to the predictions and sometimes fulfills them. The cure for such a benighted individual is the day-star of Truth (Hymnal, No. 29).

"Breaking through the clouds of darkness, Black with error, doubt, and fear," Even that light, that shines in darkness, Christian Science, is the only true science of the stars.

OTHER REALITY THAN ITS APPEARANCE

Is your world comprised in some physical disorder? Does your particular one big problem seem impossible of solution, even impossible to bear? And does the horizon promise to clear if that one big thing could only be out of the way? A decoy! Does the problem seem to be a lack of supply, an insufficient income, an oversufficient outgo? Another decoy! What we really need is activity and accomplishment. We need to produce and to feel the adequacy, the effluence, the joy of achievement. There is no lack in hard work, nor of it, and Science and Health reminds us, I repeat, that "we cannot conceal the ingratitude of barren lives." Rightly considered, the one big problem becomes an incident, important it may be to dispose of, but still an incident. The cure for most unhappiness, and ever for disease, is self-forgetfulness. Selfishness and self-thinking are at the bottom of all family troubles, whether mental, the church, or in the larger aspects of the human family; and always both sides are involved, for it is no more the proper part of man to see a quarrel than to seek one, or to see an obnoxious person than to be one. Is something, anything, claiming to come between you, my friend, and your joy, peace, enthusiasm, duty? Just a decoy, whatever it may claim and however inexorable and important it may seem. Remember that nothing is important enough to worry over, or in the larger aspects of the human family; and always both sides are involved, for it is no more the proper part of man to see a quarrel than to seek one, or to see an obnoxious person than to be one. The Tynmites helped Duncy climb down from the pumpkin. "What a time I had inside that great big thing," said Duncy with a grin. "You see, there was just room for me and 'twas as hot as it could be. We wished to play a joke on you, and that's why I crawled in."

"While all of you were walkin' round, I sneaked away without a sound and helped the diver clean the insides of the pumpkin out." "The pumpkin meat was saved and now were going to have a feast, somehow. A piece of

The Tynmites met the owner of the bull, and Scouty said, "I'd love to try and ride that fellow." "Go ahead," the owner said. "I guess that you will be all right, if you make sure to hang on tight. Try not to get excited, lad. Keep cool. Don't lose your head."

He then helped Scouty climb aboard, and all the happy Tynmites roared as Scouty bounced up in the air. The bull was running wild.

It tried to jostle Scouty loose, but shortly found 'twas of no use. The more the big bull jumped around, the more we Scouty smiled.

LABOR DAY EMPHASIZES POSSIBILITIES OF LABOR

Never in the history of our country has Labor Day come, when there were the possibilities of labor being so important and meaningful as it appears today.

The world industrially has been dispirited and crashed for four years, and large parts of the world for three times that period. The hum of machinery has been silenced; fires long since have been banked, and some of them have entirely been put out. Idle men and women, by the millions, have faced each succeeding year increased want, worry and doubt.

At last, partly by artificial planning and stimulation, partly, we hope, through natural causes, there is the beginning of recovery and in this country a very distinct plan and program, national in its scope and complete in its ramifications, that has as its objective the employment of all people and such distribution of goods as to insure the necessities of life, it not the comforts, to everyone, is being instituted.

The government has, in this program, determined to carry it out through the adoption, if possible, of voluntary codes by the industries, through the representatives of both the employer and employee. In this program the government has laid down the general proposition that there shall be a recognition of the right to collective bargaining by the employees.

It is in the interpretation and administration of that part of the law, in which the whole question of organized labor and more completely, possibly, the success of the program, certainly as far as it relates to a voluntary code, rests. We do not believe that anyone seriously questions the high ideals and the lofty purposes which dominate the President and most of his advisors at the present hour. It is unfortunate indeed that the groups to which he looks for aid in putting this program into effect, have largely been trained in the schools that taught the very things that now will have to be forgotten if success is to be made of the whole enterprise.

The theory upon which the President has been trying to carry on is that this shall be a partnership between the government and business, and those who are in harmony with him must have that theory that all the way it is a partnership, and that we must not seek to plan it so that any shall receive more than their due, to the detriment of others in the partnership. The leaders of the extreme capitalistic group have been dominated entirely by the profit motive, and to that end in many cases have worked their men and women long hours at poor pay.

Those in labor who have been dominated by the same spirit have organized, as far as they could, and through the threat of strikes or boycotts, have aimed to gain as much for those in their organization, without much consideration to anyone else. As the President looked around for help, he naturally selected the men who had developed strong and big as industrialists, and those who were leaders of the labor organization.

As he has gotten them together, he has found that the old antagonisms, that the jealousies and that greed has made it difficult, and in some cases, impossible to reach an agreement upon a just and fair code for the industry. In our judgment, it might have been very different had our labor organizations during the past decades had in mind all people who were earning wages, and not alone those people who happened to be members of this particular organization. If it had the high ideals, where it stood for the principles involved, whether they were denied to the weakest and humblest and those who were not members of the organization, as well as those who were, they would have developed a thinking which would have insured a trustworthiness now, which we do not believe that it possesses.

And by the same token, some of the industrial leaders, at the head of such industries as the bituminous coal mines, are as unfitted to rely upon as men capable of bringing out a fair code to all involved. In other words, those in temporary authority in the respective organizations, right at the crucial time in our history when social change is being made, have been "weighed in the balance and found wanting."

The outcome will finally be that the government itself will have to adopt a code without reference to any pre-conceived organizations, either of capital or of labor. Or if it finds those in either group who can be trusted, it will probably find them, not among the leaders on either side, but in average men who have not been elected to leadership, because leadership has meant, as a rule, that they have been able to express the convictions of their group in the most emphatic and oracular manner, and stand most radically for the extreme view.

This is not what is needed now. In fact, that position will absolutely defeat the purposes of the government. We are rather impressed that our Chief Executive has had these difficulties in the way from the beginning, and he will not permit either group or any representatives of either group to prevent the whole scheme from being inaugurated.

Both labor and capital must think as never before, in terms of the interest of all people, of all laborers, of all wage-earners, of all consumers and of all owners. For if there is one thing more than another that has been discovered in these brief months since national planning began, it is that the interest of the one cannot be affected, without the interest of all, and of all the country, being touched by that same incident.

We would call attention to the fact that Professor William F. Ogburn's resignation emphasized a thing that must be taken care of, and that is the interest of the public. Achievement of permanent value to the nation and the world will never be reached upon the basis that when a labor organization, firm and solidly knit together and built, and the employers of that particular group, have agreed upon a plan that that should be the plan. For it is entirely possible that the two, joining agreeably together, shall only in that larger measure filch their income unjustly from the balance of the public.

TRADE WITH THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT

A plan for trade between the United States and Russia has been adopted. Some of our surplus cotton is to be sold in exchange for such Russian goods as does not affect our domestic trade economy. If the amount of goods does not equal the value of the cotton sent, credit is to be given, either by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or through the banks.

It is interesting to note that the refusal to recognize the Soviet government cannot be based upon its refusal to pay its debts, for the United States government is perfectly willing to take what Russia can pay, and write the rest on the "cuff."

We are a delightfully inconsistent people. We base our conduct, when it suits our prejudices, upon one principle, and we set the principle aside without reason or explanation when it suits our convenience or increases our trade. In other words, we are realists, and we govern our actions and our attitudes entirely on the basis of self-interest.

It has always been an absurdity to refuse recognition to a nation of 150,000,000 people. As if its existence could be blinked by closing the eyes to it. Our prejudices are so irrational that we wonder that thinking men and women can be so childish. The recognition of Russia by our government is, as inevitable as the break of morning. A government of 150,000,000 people will make itself felt and heard in spite of any policy adopted by the nations of the world toward it. We in this country are only finding it out a little later than some of the other nations of the world.

An Heroic Martyr to Childish Happiness

Pomona Progress-Bulletin

Fire Chief John B. Lone of Kearney, N. J., is dead because he tried to keep a Christmas from being spoiled for a group of orphaned children.

The story goes back a long way—nearly six years, in fact.

On Christmas eve in 1927 a Kearney orphanage caught fire. The orphans were all got out safely, but after they had been rescued Chief Lone noticed that they stood around watching the flames, crying disconsolately.

"Why the tears?" he asked.

And he learned that all the Christmas toys for the youngsters were stored inside the building. Santa, it seems, had left them there, and he was due to come back and distribute them very shortly; now they were going to be burned up, and Santa would be so disappointed that he probably would never visit the Kearney orphans again.

So Chief Lone—well, if you know firemen you don't need to be told, do you? He made a dozen trips into the burning building, coming out each time with his arms full of toys, until he had saved the whole lot. Then he collapsed. Next day he came down with double pneumonia. He got over it, but his health was permanently ruined; and the other day an illness arising directly from the over-exposure and over-exertion of six years ago took his life.

Now that's all there is to the story. And it's not especially remarkable, because the woods are full of firemen who would have done precisely the same thing. But there is something about it that puts a lump in one's throat, just the same.

Every once in a while some perfectly ordinary human being comes along and does something which proves that the human race has a whole lot more nobility and splendor than most of us ever imagine.

Self-preservation may be the first law of nature, and selfishness may be the motive-power for most of our actions but a sweating fireman can toss his life into a burning building to keep a few ragged kids from having an unhappy Christmas, and can consider the achievement well worth the cost.

If you like to hunt for proofs that human beings can be, after all, only a little more than the angels, you might chalk this stunt of Fire Chief John B. Lone up near the head of the list.

Unrest seems to be increasing among those striking dairymen in upstate New York. Latest reports indicate that even the cows are no longer contented.

A Master Printer

Christian Science Monitor

In the passing of Sir Emery Walker, in London, the kingdom of books loses the Rabelais who, as Prime Minister, created monarchs of typography whose names today are far more familiar as household words than his own. When the Kelmscott Press is mentioned, one thinks of William Morris, but the rare quality of the Kelmscott volumes is due wholly to Emery Walker.

William Morris was no printer. He brought to the book a scholar's deep appreciation and the sensitive touch of an artist-decorator, but except for the sympathetic, practical guiding hand of Emery Walker, the marvelous productions of the Kelmscott Press—even granting that they could have come into existence at all—would have been received as objects d'art rather than as books.

The closing of the Kelmscott Press left Emery Walker free to accept Cobden-Sanderson's urgent invitation to join with him in the creation of the Doves Press, and when the Doves Press is mentioned the name of Thomas James Cobden-Sanderson stands forth. Cobden-Sanderson was a great bookbinder, but he was no printer. He never even saw a printing press until Walker, after the partnership was formed, made a point of showing him one.

Walker designed the Doves type, based upon Nicolas Jenson's fifteenth century face but translated with rare artistic understanding into the most beautiful type ever cut. Walker engaged the compositors at the Doves Press and supervised the typography. Except for the sheets of the Doves Bible Walker was responsible for the proof reading. In a word, the Doves books were Emery Walker's books, and in their format the designer put into practice those splendid definitions of perfect bookmaking laid down in William Morris' written works, which Morris himself tried to follow and failed because of his super-saturation with Gothic decorative art.

Emery Walker was by instinct and training a great master artist-printer. Aside and beyond his personal contributions, he gave freely of his time and knowledge to other printers who sought his advice and assistance. His influence in bringing about the Renaissance in printing during the past half century has been the greatest of any single figure in the history of the book.

Can Labor Achieve It's New Day?

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

A NOTE OF ALARM

Skeeter on the window pane,
Weevil gnawing at the wheat,
Fly with microscopic brain,
Microbe swarming on the street,
You were made without a mind
You've been useless from your birth.
But some day perhaps we'll find
That you'll drive us off the earth.

Through time's immemorial flight
No advantages you've had;
You can neither read nor write,
You cannot subtract nor add;
But despite your lack of wit,
While the centuries passed by,
One in fairness must admit
You know how to multiply.

Man has sought, since Adam's day,
Planning early, toiling late,
While you calmly took your way,
Your vast ranks to decimate,
Traps and poisons, lethal drugs
In your pathway he has set,
Yet the swarming horde of bugs
Triumphs, undefeated, yet.

Man can reason, man can think;
He has mastered mighty tools;
He invented printer's ink,
He has built a million schools,
But the race is to the strong
And it seems to me quite clear
That before so very long
You will drive us off the sphere.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

PRICE CONTROL AND NATIONAL DESTINY

There are two fundamental objectives to the Roosevelt drive for national recovery:

(1) To raise the general level of prices to a point at which business and industry can again make profit and the farmer realize something from his toil.

(2) To spread buying power through higher wages and shorter hours to a point at which business, industry and agriculture can realize an adequate volume of sales.

The more I watch the administration of the various Acts comprising the national recovery legislation the more I am impressed with the belief that the Roosevelt regime has intended them as a substitute for monetary inflation.

In other words, if the Administration can restore business volume and business profit through price control and through its higher wage and shorter hour crusade, I think the Thomas inflationary amendment to the Farm Relief Act will remain an unused weapon in the Roosevelt arsenal.

The Administration rightly fears the loosing of a process of inflation that might get out of hand and, even if it did raise the price level, would almost surely raise it in an irrational and ultimately destructive manner.

Clearly Mr. Roosevelt wants three things to mark any rise in the general price level:

(1) He wants prices raised moderately, for skyrocketing prices might nullify every advantage that the masses of consumers would secure through higher wages and shorter hours and wider employment.

(2) He wants some intelligent selection to enter into the raising of prices for it is not just a raise in every price, whether needed or not, that is looked for, but a raise in those prices that have been shoved below the line of reason, the prices in those fields that are crucially important to general business recovery.

(3) And he wants the management of the price level kept under control so that price relationships throughout our economic life will not go all askew.

This, I think, is the Roosevelt purpose.

It is a worthy purpose that we must bend every effort to realize, but it will be well to remember that deliberate price control by political action is one of the most difficult enterprises that statesmanship encounters.

The Administration will need all the sympathetic and scientific cooperation the business system can give it if inflation is to be avoided and a rational price control established.

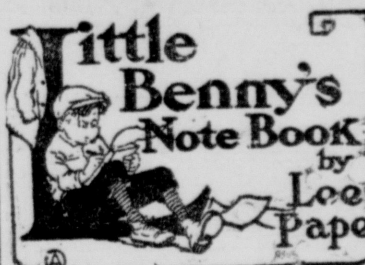

It is still an open question whether, in view of the baffling complexity of the modern economic system, such direct price control is practical in terms of the capacity we can call upon for its administration.

It is still an open question whether such direct control of prices by political action is possible unless we can completely control our foreign trade relations or can build a wholly self-sufficient economic life within our own borders while we let the rest of the world stew in its own juice.

And, above all, it is still an open question whether the price level, once it has been lifted by political action, can be maintained without resorting to currency juggling.

The wisest course for business and industry is to move heaven and earth to make the price control program work rationally.

In the Long Ago

Plans are going forward for a big Welcome Home celebration to be held at Orange County park September 9 for returned service men.

The pioneer Rafferty house, located at 1608 North Main street, which was built in 1833, is being wrecked to make way for the new colonial style home planned by C. V. Davis.

One of the team of fine horses used to pull the city street sweeper had to be killed today after it slipped on the damp pavement and fell, breaking a leg.

A change has been made in the fire signal system whistle blasts by Chief Luxembourg and Commissioner Dale. Under the new plan a long warning blast will be given before the box numbers are sounded.

GRAVE PROBLEMS

As we older folk struggle with the unusual conditions that confront us, trying to stretch a penny into covering a startling bareness, what of the children? It has been difficult for us who have been trained and disciplined in the old ways to keep steady. What training and what discipline that is going to steady them in days to come? We, who are closing schools in the faces of eager children, what harvest are we going to reap in our old age? What will be the outcome of an untrained, untaught, unenlightened generation?

Consider a moment. Who it is that destroys the ordered beauty of parks and playgrounds and woodland retreats? What sorts are those who have no regard for property rights? What background is that of the sort of nation? They do not spring from the well educated, well trained, well housed group. They are those who for some reason, usually beyond their choice or control, have been neglected by society. They lack education, understanding and the neighborly feeling that leans toward cooperation. For such we have ourselves to blame.

One cannot know what one does not experience. If a child knows that he gets only what he can snatch and hold on to in the face of a grudging society he will know only that. It would be idle to expect understanding and cooperation and neighborliness from him. If he is to be a socially minded citizen he must first experience the better way of living and the only way he can have that is through the schools.

Schools cost money and there is none. Maybe that is so. Even if it is ways must be found to educate children. We have been poorer than we are today, although some folk have suffered more in this disastrous period, and yet we managed to teach our children American ideals and ethical standards. We managed to give them a good education in the essentials and start them with a good taste in the essential values of spiritual living. We can and we must continue to do this for all our children.

Everybody is going to have more time on his hands than has been the case. Time is the shall of life. Into it we must pour the values that make living tolerable. We must experience beauty in all its forms so that we can understand it and preserve it within ourselves and in our children. That means we must educate children in the creation and conservation of beauty, usefulness, cooperation.

You cannot do that with crippled, cramped, closed schools. More schools, better schools, schools that are open all day and far into the night, all year round schools, are imperative. You who are wealthy consider what an uneducated generation may mean to you. You who are paying as much of a tax as you can stagger under, consider how much more off you would be if there were no schools to steady a restless and idle Youth. You who are responsible for the governing of this people, consider your grave duty to the nation and make provision for its maintenance through the education of its Youth. And do it now. Now is the time. Next year, when the depression is over, when things are easier and the world is at ease, is too late. The schools must open and they must function to their limits. There are grave problems involved and our safety is involved in their solution.
